Bluff Beats Crook

A 16-year-old Colwood boy collared a robber Tuesday night and held him until police arrived by bluffing he'd break the man's neck with a Karate chop if he tried to escape.

"I don't know why I told him that," said Kevin Gilbertson, of 2946 Mount Well.

He told The Times today the only karate he knows is what he has seen on television or watched his friends perform.

"It sounded like something good to say."

But the bluff worked. The man stood still, Kevin poised in front of him in "the only karate stance I know."

In provincial court in Victoria this morning, Morris Armand Dupuis, 37, of Trailer 9, 2630 Deville Road, Colwood, pleaded guilty to robbing the Devonshire Grocery on Goldstream Road.

Judge William Ostler remanded Dupuis to March 2 for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

Kevin said he went into the store at about 8 p.m. to buy a bottle of pop and noticed a man arguing with store owner-operator Bing Mar.

Kevin said he paid for his drink and was leaving when he saw the man reach into the till and pull out a fist-full of bills.

Kevin ran outside and told two friends, Jim Stratford, 18, of Finlayson Arm Road, and Gyula Kiss, 16, of 2867 Sunvale Place, what was happening. Stratford and Kiss got into their car and sped to the Colwood RCMP station a quarter mile down the road.

Kevin said he waited for the man to come out, followed him a short distance, turned him around and warned the man not to move because he had his black belt in karate.

At one point the man tried to get something out of his pocket. Kevin thrust out his arm in a threatening gesture and the man pulled his hand back.

"I don't know if he had a weapon or not, but I wasn't taking any chances," Kevin said.

Kevin said the man told him he had been kicked out of his home, had nothing to live on, nothing to eat and needed money.

A Colwood RCMP spokesman said $72 taken in the robbery was recovered. The robber, as it turned out, wasn't armed, the spokesman added.

Cherry Point Again Eyed As Oil Port

Cherry Point is once again in line to become the main terminal for shipment of Alaskan oil, a plan strongly criticized by the land use secretariat of the provincial government.

Trans Mountain Pipeline Co. Ltd. of Vancouver is negotiating with Atlantic Richfield Co. Ltd. for the use of the Arco refinery at Cherry Point.

Trans Mountain wants to turn the existing pipeline from Edmonton to Vancouver (and down to Cherry Point) into a two-way funnel. On some days Alaska oil would move from Cherry Point up to Vancouver and over to Edmonton and then down through the U.S. mid-west, all through existing pipelines.

On other days Alberta oil would flow west to Vancouver for use in British Columbia refineries. Alaskan oil is not suitable for B.C. refineries because of its chemical content.

A report prepared for the B.C. government said British Columbia's interests would be better served by having Port Angeles the main supertanker port, rather than Cherry Point or Kitimat. Trans Mountain earlier had proposed that Alaska oil be unloaded at Kitimat and transported to Edmonton by a new pipeline across British Columbia.

Fielding Formway, manager of the Cherry Point refinery, said the needs of Arco and Trans Mountain "seem to mesh pretty well" and an agreement could be reached.

Various government agencies would have to approve the agreement on both sides of the border.

Cherry Point is just north of Bellingham and 10 miles from the B.C. border. Supertankers must negotiate past a number of small gulf islands to reach the site. By contrast they have clear sailing to Port Angeles.

An oil spill at Cherry Point would affect a wide area from Seattle to Vancouver and including the east coast of Vancouver Island.

A smaller area would be affected by an oil spill at Port Angeles but the effects would be about the same at either point as far as Victoria is concerned.

Garry Gallon, president of the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society (SPEC), said there would be a great danger if tankers travel through the Gulf Islands to Cherry Point.

"This would increase by a factor of three the potential of an oil spill occurring than those tankers that would be using Port Angeles as a port," he said.

"A spill near or at Cherry Point would roll right up into the Fraser River estuary," he said. "A spill at Port Angeles would do much less damage.

"As far as B.C. is concerned, Port Angeles is the best site, not Cherry Point or Kitimat."

A study by the B.C. government's land use secretariat came to the same conclusion after studying the options of a tanker port at Port Angeles, Cherry Point and Kitimat.

The B.C. government report warns that detailed environmental information on the Kitimat site is inadequate and says no final decision should be made until there is a complete analysis.

MOUSE IN BEER . . . $1,500 DAMAGES

TORONTO (CP)—A Toronto man has been awarded $1,500 in a civil suit after finding a dead mouse in a bottle of beer he had been drinking.

Olava Mirand, 48, told county court that he noticed a bad taste while drinking beer in his kitchen May 5, 1973.

His wife Clarinda held the Labatt's 50 bottle up to the light and detected the remains of a field mouse.

That night Mirand vomited for 30 minutes. Three days later, Dr. J. I. Gabay found Mirand's face and upper body covered in a rash from an allergic reaction. The patient also showed evidence of liver poisoning.

Mirand testified he drank a case of beer each week for 16 years before the incident but now he cannot stomach beer and has been forced to switch to wine. On the stand he shied away when asked to identify the bottle containing the remains of the rodent.

$69M LOSS FORECAST FOR BCR

The government-owned B.C. Railway will lose about $69 million this year, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Tusday.

Phillips, minister responsible for the railway, said the losses as of Dec. 31, 1976, amounted to $53.2 million and the projected loss to the end of the fiscal year March 31, 1977, is set at $69 million.

The railway lost about $45.9 million last year.

Phillips said the railway is operating as efficiently as it ever has and congratulated the new Socred-appointed board of directors for doing a "tremendous" job.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom refused Tuesday to answer specific questions on whether the Royal Commission inquiry into the B.C. Railway will include a study of the M.E.L. Paving Ltd. controversy.

But Gardom refused to be specific and said only the commission is empowered to look into all aspects of the railway and that the terms of reference are "very, very broad."

A royal commission into the BCR was announced earlier in the day by Premier Bill Bennett. The three-member commission is headed by Mr. Justice Lloyd McKenzie of the B.C. Supreme Court. He is a former Victoria lawyer. (For background on the three see Page 11.)

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said earlier that Gardom must say whether the commission will include a study of M.E.L. or it "could be labelled a smoke screen."

Gardom said in the legislature that one of the terms of references empowers the commission to look into the "over-all operation of the railway," and then spelled out over-all. He also took five minutes to read out the order-in-council which ordered the commission.

"It's the whole bag," he said.

Outside the house, the attorney-general said he felt it would be improper for him to expand the general terms of reference into specifics.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, minister responsible for the BCR, said outside the house before question period he thought M.E.L. will be included in the commission's inquiry.

"The terms of reference are broad indeed," Phillips said. "I would imagine they would include all past, present and future actions of the railway."

The BCR settled out of court for $2.5 million with M.E.L. after 41 days of a trial on a charge of civil fraud against the government-owned railway.

It was revealed Tuesday that another company which had worked on the Dease Lake extension of the railway, Doug Ragan Construction Ltd., had also settled for about $1.2 million.

The two companies have said the railway underestimated construction costs on the extension.

Tory leader Scott Wallace said during debate on Phillips' spending estimates that there is an "incredible mess and smell" surrounding the BCR.

"The over-all image of the BCR is at its lowest ebb," Wallace said.

He also charged that Phillips had put himself in a conflict of interest position when he met with creditors of Doug Ragan Construction Ltd. in August, 1976.

Many of the Ragan creditors were from Phillips' home town of Dawson Creek and as their MLA he met with them in August, 1976.

Soweto Pupils Under Curfew

SOWETO (CP) — All schools in black Soweto township were closed today after police fired tear gas to disperse about 6,000 student demonstrators disrupting last year's long-delayed final examination.

Brig. Jan Visser, the white police chief of the huge black city eight miles southwest of Johannesburg, said the schools will reopen Thursday, but all students will be confined to their classrooms by a curfew between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Youths found on the streets during those hours will be regarded as students, and police will be tough with them, he said.

After a morning of book burning by crowds of students at a number of schools, a tour through the segrated township by a white reporter was uneventful.

All high schools were deserted. Primary school pupils were walking home at noon in knots of three and four children. No injuries were reported.

The police were not in sight, and the city appeared normal. But sources in the township said militant student leaders are planning to challenge the government Thursday by continuing their boycott of the examinations to protest the disparity between white and black educational facilities.

Earlier today, police used tear gas and baton charges to scatter 4,000 students burning books at one high school and 2,000 at another. No casualties were reported.

Students last year touched off major unrest in the country in protest against what they considered inferior education and the country's segregationist policies in general. South Africa has an 84-per-cent non-white population.

ANTI-LEAK PROPOSAL LEAKED

Council considered and rejected a proposed bylaw that would have set fines of $500 for aldermen who reveal closed-session secrets, according to the Vanouver Province.

The newspaper says the legislation was drawn up by Mayor Ed McKitka and exempted him from possible penalty.

A report by the municipal solicitor also recommended that a court be empowered to require that any reporter who received secret information testify in a trial of an alderman charged under the proposed legislation.

'Pre-Packaged' Sentences Help Teachers Fight AIB

COQUITLAM (CP) — The Coquitlam Teachers Association appears to be concerned with its members' letter-writing talents in a current campaign against the federal anit-inflation program.

The association wants its members to write members of the British Columbia Legislature and MPs from B.C., urging that the program be ended.

In an apparent effort to ensure that teachers write the letters, and possibly to ease the mental strain, the association is offering a list of sentences its members might want to use.

"Compose your own letter," the association's form letter says.

"You can, if you wish, choose our suggested sentences for each section of your letter. Make any changes you think appropriate. Write two letters, MP and MLA.

"Sign your name to the letters."

The document then suggests 17 introductory sentences.

For the body of the letter, it reminds that the reasons for opposing the program, which should be included, are: "elimination of bargaining rights; wage controls without effective price controls; rollbacks are inconsistent and arbitrary."

One observer who read the association letter suggested that in a time of restraint, the association could have sent copies of its form letter to the politicians.

In that way, teachers writing in would have needed to say only: "Dear Sir — 3, 12, 14. Yours truly."

Costly to Lure Americans Here

OTTAWA (CP) — It takes about 25 per cent more pay to lure employees of Massey-Ferguson Ltd. front the United States to Canada, so much better are U.S. personal income tax benefits and living costs, company officials told a Senate committee Tuesday.

In the United States, for example, most forms of loan interest, interest on mortgage payments, some sales taxes, motor vehicle licence charges may be claimed as deductions against personal income tax. And husbands and wives may file joint returns if that helps to lower their personal tax rate.

Guns in Yacht, City Man Held

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A Victoria man is being held without charge in a French prison on Martinique after his charter yacht was found to contain arms authorities say were to be used to overthrow the Barbados government.

Barbados Prime Minister Tom Adams claims the arms were destined to be used in a plot to overthrow his government.

Clouston, who has been in jail in Forte-de-France, capital of Martinique, since early last October, is innocent according to his family here.

Relatives say they are convinced Clouston was unaware the cargo he was carrying for Burnett-Alleyene consisted of arms.

Neither he nor Burnett-Alleyne has been charged.

His first — and last job — was for Burnett-Alleyne.

Adams, newly elected prime minister of Barbados, believes the arms were to be used in a bid to topple his government.

Canadian officials are puzzled by Clouston's involvement. How much did he know either about Burnett-Alleyne or the alleged cargo of weapons before his arrest?

Clouston's mother, Mrs. G. W. Clouston, of 36-3987 Gordon Head, told the Times Tuesday she is convinced her son knew nothing, and that in his eagerness to get into the charter business, he was duped.

"I think he's been the victim of circumstances . . . and perhaps his own indiscretion," he told The Times on Tuesday.

Mrs. Clouston said the first she heard of her son's arrest was in a letter from him that arrived in late November.

She immediately contacted the External Affairs department in Ottawa. They advised her not to go to the press, not to have anything reported, she said.

"The person I talked with told me there were problems over publicity concerning a Canadian jailed in Mexico. The reports infuriated the Mexican government. He didn't want the same thing to happen in Russ' case."

HERE'S THAT HYMN

LONDON — A jubilee hymn in tribute to the Queen's 25th anniversary of her reign has stirred up a tempest in the British press and Parliament.

"Absolutely pathetic . . . the most banal, ninth-rate piece of child's verse," a Conservative MP branded the official Jubilee hymn by 70-year-old poet laureate John Betjeman.

The hymn was sung to music by Malcolm Williamson, Master of the Queen's Music, Sunday at the Royal Albert Hall.

Following is the tribute, beginning with the chorus and followed by its five verses:

For our monarch and her people
United yet and free,
Let the bells from ev'ry steeple
Ring out loud the jubilee.

In days of disillusion
However low we've been
To fire us and inspire us
God gave to us our Queen.

She acceded, young and dutiful,
To a much-loved father's throne,
Serene and kind and beautiful,
She holds us as her own.

And twenty-five years later
So sure her reign has been
That our great events are greater
For the presence of our Queen.

Hers the grace the church has prayed for
Ours the joy that she is here,
Let the bells do what they're made for,
Ring our thanks both loud and clear.

From that look of elation
In those eyes profoundly blue
We know her coronation

Hostage Held Despite Apology

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A former West Point gun instructor, claiming he had been cheated in a business deal, today showed no sign of releasing the president of a real estate firm he held at gunpoint in an apartment rigged with dynamite.

"Tell my lawyer to go home," Anthony Kiritsis shouted through the apartment door late Tuesday. "I will talk with everybody in the morning."

The gunman cut off communication until today despite an apology, an agreement to both cancel a debt and pay him damages, as well as indications from authorities that he might not be prosecuted. About 200 law officers, plus army bomb experts and reporters, stood watch at the apartment through the night.

Police also confirmed that in 1968 Kiritsis held his sister hostage for two days during a family dispute until other members of the family paid him $50,000. Family members agreed, however, not to press charges.

Kiritsis, 44, wired a sawed-off semi-automatic shotgun to Richard Hall's neck Tuesday morning at his downtown office. He then marched Hall through downtown Indianapolis in shirtsleeves in 10-degree weather while holding police at bay until a squad car was delivered for his use at the Indiana statehouse.

He forced Hall to drive to the Westside apartment where Kiritsis has lived for several years. Then, he barricaded himself inside and warned police that the apartment was wired so that any attempt to shoot through the windows or enter it would set off dynamite.

Police confirmed the windows had been wired and that Kiritsis had recently purchased at least 25 sticks of dynamite.

Indianapolis deputy police chief James McAtee said Tuesday night police thought Kiritsis had enough food in the third-floor apartment to last four days.

Newsman Dies On Holiday

VANCOUVER — Veteran news and feature photographer Eric Cable, 63, has died of a heart attack while vacationing in Panama City.

Mr. Cable, who was widely known for his photography, joined The province newspaper in Vancouver in 1948 when he came to B.C. from England. In 1954 he left for California where he spent two years as a free-lance photographer before rejoining The Province in 1956.

Mr. Cable had worked for the CBC for the past 16 years.

Polysar's Controversial Sales Rebates Cancelled

OTTAWA (CP) — Polysar Ltd., a former government-owned company, said today it no longer will pay rebates to customers through a Swiss subsidiary after an inquiry described such rebates as unacceptable practices.

The two-man inquiry, set up by the company board late last year when allegations were made that the company was paying kickbacks, said the rebates involved totalled $4.8 million over the last six years.

"We found nothing to indicate any actual or attempted bribery on the part of any employee involved in negotiating with or sales to customers," the inquiry report said.

"We did find, however, that objectionable or questionable practices in fact existed in respect to sales to some 13 direct customers and to 14 of PISA's distributors at one time or another during the period."

PISA is Polysar International SA, a company based in Switzerland.

The issue broke last November when it was learned former auditor-general Maxwell Henderson wrote to the prime minister in March, 1973, saying the company was billing customers at inflated prices and rebating the difference to them in Switzerland.

In the wake of a Commons furore over the letter, the company appointed John B. Aylesworth, a retired Ontario Appeal Court judge, and David Stanley, a vice-president of Wood Gundy and a director of Polysar, to investigate.

Allan Lawrence, the Progressive Conservative chairman of the public accounts committee which will investigate the case, said the inquiry report "is a shocker."

He said the report adds to the impression that some crown corporations "not only engaged in irregular financial procedures but even, as is suggested in the Polysar report, facilitated illegal or unethical business practices."

"It is almost beyond credibility that such practices could be used as the off-shoot of a corporation which is owned by and operated for Canadian taxpayers," Lawrence said in a statement.

Wallace charged that Phillips should not have met the creditors who were attempting to get money from the B.C. Railway of which the minister is a director.

"Does the minister consider it correct to meet with creditors who are seeking redress from a Crown corporation and where the creditors live in his own riding?" Wallace asked.

"There is an incredible conflict of responsibility and interest by pleading the cause of creditors in his own riding."

Wallace said Phillips had often said that Crown corporations should be free of political interference.

"He's trying to function on both sides of the fence."

Wallace said it was also unusual for Phillips' spending estimates to be the first considered by the legislature this sitting.

Traditionally, he said, the premier's estimates are considered first and then the other cabinet ministers' come up in alphabetical order.

Wallace said there was unreasonable haste to get Phillips' estimates out of the way because of the "day-to-day unfolding of information detrimental to him."

Debate on Phillips' estimates will continue.

EARLY BUDGET URGED FOR JOBS

OTTAWA (CP) — A record level of unemployment in January of 889,000 persons brought fresh demands from the opposition Tuesday for a quick budget to stimulate the economy.

Statistics Canada reported the January total of actual unemployed was about 135,000 higher than the figure for December and 89,000 more than jobless totals a year ago.

The unemployment rate, adjusted for seasonal changes last month, was 7.5 per cent, the same rate as December's but the highest for a January since 1961.

With opposition MPs pressing for a budget to include creation measures, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said simply that the government had already—as of Jan. 1—put into effect income tax cuts and increased family allowance payments which should help the economy.

He told the Commons a budget would be introduced into Parliament "within the next several months."

He has said recently a budget might come earlier this year than usual. Favored months for the introduction of budgets have been May and June in the last decade.

In the Commons, Conservative finance critic Sinclair Stevens said that since it takes six to nine months for a budget to have an effect, the government should act speedily to boost the economy.

Ed Broadbent, the New Democratic Party leader, who asked for an emergency debate on unemployment but was rebuffed by Speaker James Jerome, said there is a human and economic crisis in the country. He added that Statistics Canada had underestimated the number of unemployed, saying there were in fact more than one million persons without jobs.

But Macdonald and Prime Minister Trudeau replied that the indexing of personal income tax, cuts in the contributions rates for unemployment insurance premiums and increases in family allowances, which all went into effect Jan. 1, would mean an influx of $1.7 billion into the economy.

Pacific disturbances to date have been weakening rapidly on reaching the coast. Most of the precipitation has been confined to the northern coast and the west coast of Vancouver Island. A slight change appears to be taking place. The next major system is expected to hit the coast tonight or Thursday morning with more impact than its predecessors. Rain thus will be more general along the coast and showers of rain or snow will penetrate into the interior.

LONG SPACE STAY SET FOR SOVIETS

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Soviet cosmonauts Viktor Gorbatko and Yuri Glazkov today transferred to the orbiting Salyut 5 space station and looked set for a long stay in space.

The transfer followed the successful docking Tuesday night of their Soyuz 24 ferry vehicle launched Monday from the Baikonur pad in Kazakhstan, Soviet central Asia.

News of the transfer, about 150 miles above the earth's surface, was given by the official Soviet news agency Tass.

It said the cosmonauts will continue research and experiments started by the team from Soyuz 21 last summer. Those cosmonauts were brought back to earth after 48 days amid hints in the Soviet press that they suffered from the psychological strain of prolonged space flight.

Tass said the program will include exploration of the earth's surface and atmosphere, technological experiments and biological research, believed to involve the growing of plants, fish and other creatures in weightless space.

Controllers Charged

BELGRADE (Reuter) — Eight flight controllers at Yugoslavia's Zagreb airport were charged Tuesday with causing the world's worst inflight plane collision in which 176 people died.

The crash last September between a British Airways Trident and a Yugoslav DC-9 high over Yugoslavia on Sept. 10 killed everybody aboard the two airliners.

Zagreb's deputy public prosecutor said the eight controllers have beeen charged with committing grave offences against public safety and being responsible for all the deaths.

The DC-9 took off from the Adriatic port of Split and was flying to Cologne, West Germany, when it collided with the British airliner, which was en route to Istanbul from London.

The Trident carried 54 passengers, most of them British, and nine crew. There were five crew members on the DC-9.

The charges alleged that the first accused, controller Gradimir Tasic, had failed to apply the regulations prescribed for keeping the planes on separate courses.

Probe Mishap, Ryan Urges

MONTREAL (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque told a Chamber of Commerce luncheon Tuesday he was living through a "difficult personal moment" after being involved in a car accident in which a 62-year-old man died.

"It's not the kind of thing you put out of your mind," Levesque said of the fatal accident early Sunday. He described the incident as "one of those things you always expect to happen to somebody else."

Meanwhile, two prominent Quebec citizens called for a public inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the mishap.

"It is clear things cannot remain as they are now—too many things remain obscure," Le Devoir editor Claude Ryan wrote in an editorial demanding an inquiry.

Jerome Choquette, a former provincial justice minister, said a Quebec Superior Court judge should be named to "clear up this affair and get rid of all ambiguities."

An autopsy showed the victim, Edgar Trottier, died of a single impact which caused a cerebral hemorrhage, a skull fracture and a sectioned spinal cord near the neck.

The autopsy report said Trottier was alive at the time of the initial impact, but coroner Maurice Laniel said there is no proof the car driven by Levesque was responsible for the impact.

Police said the premier's car struck Trottier, who was lying on a winding, four-lane road, and dragged him 140 feet before coming to a halt. The man was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital.

The car is owned by Levesque's personal secretary, Corinne Cote, who was with the premier at the time of the accident.

George Wilson, who had spotted the body in the middle of the street seconds before the accident, is quoted as telling police Trottier was moving an arm and leg in the air and appeared to be trying to rise when he was hit at 4:15 a.m. Sunday.

Enough Arsenic to Kill World

OTTAWA (CP) — Environment Minister Romeo LeBlanc said Tuesday there is government concern about arsenic waste buried in mine shafts at Yellowknife, N.W.T.

An environment department official there has been quoted as saying the arsenic, if it ever got loose, is enough to wipe out the entire world population.

LeBlanc said in the Commons that the concern stems from the fact that the waste is buried in areas of permafrost. He indicated there is a potential danger of the permafrost thawing, allowing the arsenic to leak from the shafts.

Reports from Yellowknife earlier in the day said Giant Yellowknife mine, which produces gold, has stored 300,000 tons of arsenic waste in underground shafts. The storage began about four years ago when it was found that too much arsenic was being emitted into the air and the company started catching it in bags.

Arsenic is found in gold-bearing ore and becomes a byproduct when the rock is smelted to release the gold.

LeBlanc, answering opposition questions, said an environment department official had told the territorial water board about the potential danger of underground storage. The official had insisted that a condition of renewal of the mining company's waste licence be that "the problem be focussed on."

The waste is being put into mined-out shafts above areas that still are being mined.

The Yellowknife reports said the waste does not present an immediate problem as long as it is watched carefully. However, there were fears that when the mine eventually closes, it will flood. Flood waters would melt the permafrost and the arsenic might seep out into Great Slave Lake, a huge body of water connected with major northern river systems.

The environment department is said to have recommended that the temperature of the permafrost be checked constantly and that the storage shafts be pumped forever so no flooding occurs.

A northern affairs official in Yellowknife was quoted as saying that checks were to have been made from time to time but the federal treasury board never had approved a budget for the project.

Doug Neil (PC—Moose Jaw) told the House the environment department has urged northern affairs to act on the situation but nothing has been done.

He sought to move a motion asking LeBlanc, Northern Affairs Minister Warren Allmand or Health Minister Marc Lalonde to explain the lack of co-operation between departments. The proposed motion also asked whether environmental studies were done before the burial program was started and what action is planned now.

The motion did not receive the unanimous consent necessary for it to be discussed.

In Yellowknife, Dr. Ron Wallace, a federal environmentalist who made a report in 1974 on the arsenic threat, said that he was "rather surprised and disappointed" no government agencies had studied it.

MPs on Flying Prison Probe

OTTAWA (CP) At least three members of Parliament fly to Kingston, Ont., today to investigate reports that one or two Millhaven Institute prisoners they spoke to last week were later sprayed with tear gas.

A special Commons subcommittee on prison violence decided Tuesday to send the MPs rather than wait for a report from the Canadian Penitentiaries Service on the incident.

John Reynolds, Progressive Conservative member for Burnaby-Delta-Richmond, said a quick all-party investigation should be held because "bruises can disappear."

Stuart Leggett, New Democratic Party member for New Westminster, said he was told tear gas was used on two men and one had been beaten.

Official sources have confirmed that tear gas was used on one prisoner after he insulted guards, punched one, then barricaded himself in his cell.

Use of the gas was authorized by Millhaven director, John Dowsett.

The report of the gassing, which came from an account signed by six Millhaven prisoners who say they saw it, caused an uproar in the subcommittee, which spent 13 hours at Millhaven last week listening to tales of beatings, gassings and the use of dogs on prisoners.

In Kingston, a man who was freed Tuesday said the six prisoners are prepared to testify against the guards involved.

Dan West said in an interview that althoguh he was not a witness, he plans to meet with Toronto lawyer Clayton Ruby to initiate criminal proceedings on behalf of the beaten prisoner.

Secretive Government

Only a few months ago the prime minister told Canadians they must look beyond their narrow interests and overcome mistrust of government if the country is to solve its social, economic and political problems. A fine sentiment in a country so regionalized that a minister of the crown in one province welcomes the balkanization of the country because it will save his ministry money, in his parochial view. But how can Canadians overcome their mistrust of government when it relies on secrecy to conduct public business?

Here in Victoria we need look no further than municipal councils to prove the point. Narrow minded, inept administrations are so frightened of their own pale shadows they don't present issues in open council until they have been decided behind closed doors. Our provincial government is negotiating a $1 billion coal deal in the northeast of the province, providing only the barest of details to the electorate. On the top floor of the official skyscraper a parliamentary committee accused the federal government last week of using its sweeping powers to trample citizens' basic rights. Regulations are passed in secret and never properly explained to those affected. The joint Senate-Commons committee listed anomalies and distortions, including cabinet exemptions from customs duties and secret guidelines on "moral turpitude" for immigration officers deciding exclusions.

Only a day later, the prime minister — a man who was once in the RCMP's files — said the thousands and perhaps millions of citizens who keep RCMP files bulging should not necessarily have access to their files as happens in the United States. Under American law a person wishing to see a government file on himself applies to the department involved under the Privacy Act. By law the department must respond to the request, but may withhold all or part for security reasons or if some other person is mentioned in the dossier. Failing this route, any citizen may appeal to the administration officer and eventually the courts.

As Ged Baldwin, the former Progressive Conservative house leader says, "The merest whim of a government official is sufficient to keep information secret. "Baldwin is so concerned with the secrecy issue he has formed the League to Restore Parliamentary Control. Despite all the patronizing explanations for keeping documents secret, the real reasons are simply to cover inefficiency or cloud wrongdoing. A reluctant Trudeau administration has promised a draft freedom of information act. But it is obvious that pressure from some ministers and senior bureaucrats will prevent the bill from having any clout. No wonder people mistrust their governments. Anybody that operates in the shadows is bound to arouse doubts.

If we can only expect the usual protective camouflage from the Trudeau administration, the provincial governments could at least show the way. Nothing would do more to give credence to the Bennett administration than a strict freedom of information act with attendant amendments to the Municipal Act, requiring local councils to conduct everything except personnel matters and land acquisitions in public. It wouldn't be popular at city hall, but it would do much to convince an increasingly cynical electorate that government is the will of the people as opposed to divine right and a majority.

Zzzz . . .

Soon all Canadians will be able to see and hear their members of parliament live and in color on the tube, in the comfort and safety of their own homes. Whether the daily House of Commons show, competing as it must with the afternoon soap operas, kiddie shows and cartoons, will draw many viewers, no one knows. Never underestimate the inertia of a television viewer, though. It may become as popular as Capital Comment, says.

The Conservatives have been the least enthusiastic about the debut of klieg lights and color cameras, while paying lip service to the idea of the public's right to know. Spokesmen for the party have said they want to be sure they are legally protected in anything they say. They have immunity for anything said inside the House of Commons, but some fear that broadcasting debates coast to coast will change that.

Anyway, that's the public rationale from the party of Sir John A. Macdonald. Privately, some speculate that the Conservatives are opposed to televising the House because their leader will come off a poor second up against Pierre Trudeau, whose political life was almost singlehandedly created by the tube.

But the real reason comes out. MP Howard Johnston, Tory member for Okanagan-Kootenay, said in debate recently:

"What guarantee would I have, as a member, that what was televised back home was flattering to me, or even neutral to me. On one or two occasions in this House I have even fallen asleep when some member on the other side has carried on at great length to little point. Suppose that had been captured indelibly and forever on the screen?"

Zzzzz . . .

Racial Insults

All Victorians were embarrassed Saturday by the insults and catcalls proffered by the crowd at the national defence surplus equipment auction at Work Point Barracks.

When the auction rules and terms of sale were read out in French (after first being made public in Canada's other official language) a few wits yelled out: "In English!" When Supply and Services Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer was introduced at the beginning of the auction, a few more savants shouted the same and added "O Canada! O Canada!"

Apparently they were referring to the episode in the House of Commons last week when two Quebec MPs walked out rather than listen to God Save the Queen being sung by their colleagues, and two more sat on their hands throughout the anthem. Anyway, Goyer had nothing to do with that. He sang along with the rest.

The Press and Petrodollars

TURIN, Italy — The sale by Fiat to Libya of a huge block of stock is an interesting pilot project of the kind of association between western industries and rich oil-producing lands that is bound to spread.

There have been two similar deals previously. West Germany's Krupp issued new shares and sold 25.1 per cent of these to Iran, this raising capital without yielding securities already owned. But the one tenth of one per cent above 25 per cent carries, under Krupp's statutes, implicit veto power.

Another West German giant, Daimler-Benz, sold 15 per cent of existing stocks (previously owned by shareholders) to Kuwait. Fiat made neither the Krupp concession of granting veto powers to raise new capital from Libya nor the Daimler-Benz concession of selling outstanding shares.

Krupp Did It

By its ingenious formula (now awaiting expected government authorization) Fiat issued to Col Muammer Qaddafi's state bank 30 million new shares, of which 20 million are voting stock. This represents 10 per cent of total shares previously held. The price was three times that currently posted on Italy's undervalued exchange.

Moreover, Libya acquired half that amount again in bonds convertible into stocks until 1982. It granted Fiat a $104 million 10-year loan at six per cent. The entire transaction produced new Fiat capital amounting to about $415 million while giving Libya two seats on the company's 15-man board (which includes one Swiss, one American and one Frenchman.)

Qaddafi initiated the arrangement. Libya's prestige is enhanced, as it is drawn into a major West European enterprise. And Fiat gets desperately needed funds. There have been rumors that Libya was acquiring an interest in arms production or that Moscow helped, thereby facilitating its potential influence on Arab weaponry. But Giovanni Agnelli, boss of Fiat, vigorously denies such allegations.

He himself met Qaddafi only once—and briefly — in the Soviet capital after the deal was consummated. He knew Qaddafi was flying there and wished to become acquainted with him on territory neutral to both.

The only apparent political hitch could involve Turin's renowned newspaper, La Stampa, bought by Fiat half a century ago. La Stampa is edited by the brilliant Arrigo Levi who is Jewish and fought with the Israeli army in 1948. He is a highly respected Italian journalist and a friend of Agnelli, the only Fiat official with whom he has any personal contact.

This Fiat-La Stampa relationship presents conveniences and inconveniences to both sides. When a business owns a newspaper the latter is often suspected of representing its views. Moreover, after La Stampa published a piece ridiculing Qaddafi two years ago, the latter went for Levi's head.

Libya demanded he be fired, muttered about severing economic relations with Italy and sought to force the Arab league to blacklist Fiat. However, Qaddafi has enough enemies of his own in the Arab world — and Agnelli enough friends —so that the matter was dropped. Both Levi and Agnelli insist there has been no subsequent hint Quaddafi wants to revive his feud.

Agnelli does acknowledge that the Fiat-La Stampa connection is embarrassing to both and "if it were possible to sell the paper he would do so." But there are no takers. "In the meantime we will certainly guarantee La Stampa's full freedom of expression."

La Stampa's Freedom

Levi confirms the seriousness of the guarantee, pointing out that Fiat previously spurned an effort by Spain's Francoists to force La Stampa to take a friendlier line and a similar effort by Moscow when Fiat was building its Soviet Togliatti auto plant.

"Otherwise I would have resigned. Agnelli accepted this, merely shrugging and saying he hoped it wouldn't upset the deal. It didn't. Subsequently both Fiat and Agnelli have publicly reconfirmed La Stampa's independence of views."

Canadian Mockery

As a British landed immigrant who recently became a Canadian citizen and, in doing so, took the oath of allegiance, in which I reaffirmed my "allegiance to her majesty the Queen, her heirs and successors." I find it quite ironical to hear that two members of the House of Commons refused to stand for "The Queen" and that two others walked out while it was being sung.

It surely does make a mockery of the whole citizenship ceremony, or does one assume that these four "gentlemen" are not Canadian citizens and, if not, what are they doing in the Canadian House of Commons?

A very confused new Canadian Citizen ! — Beryl M. Gong, 2448 Dunlevy Street.

False Compassion

Man! How compassionate can we get, with millions of signatures to ban the killings of harp seal pups and not one peep over the deaths of a similar number of human babies plus one million relatives of all ages, in Cambodia in the last year or two. We should get our priorities straightened out, with the homo sapiens species at the top of the list, as his needs should be considered also.

If the ban is imposed, not only will the hunters lose their livelihood but the fur industry loses an important source of supply. In Victoria furs are mainly decorative, but in many parts of the world they serve a vital function.

Man has made mistakes in the past and upset the ecological balance. Remember Australia's plague of rabbits when a few imported rabbits escaped and there was no natural predator to keep their numbers in check? They had to introduce myxomatosis, a virulent disease peculiar to rabbits, as they were decimating the forage of domestic animals and endangering indigenous species.

If another of man's mistakes has been to reduce the numbers of or eliminate the seal's natural predators, then deaths by old age alone will not keep their numbers in check, so man must do that job.

Surely, with all the facts on hand and remembering the ecological mistakes of the past, we can trust our conservation officials to set the quota of seals to be killed that ensures the continuance of the specie. — Ruby Pearson, 2085 Avondale Road.

Pool in Oak Bay centre — costing taxpayers $700,000!

Recreation's Cost

Oak Bay municipality can point with some pride to its recreational program and facilities. The recreation centre is extremely popular, and the millionth user has recently passed through its doors. The "tennis place" is excellent under its ultramodern bubble, and seems to be used all the time. The centre is understandably patronized by people from the whole Victoria district.

All this is admirable, but I hope that council together with the citizens of Oak Bay are taking a careful look at the costs of these very luxurious services. Bear in mind that the building of the recreation centre was undertaken over the objections of the citizens of Oak Bay, expressed through two referenda.

I have before me now the financial statement of the parks and recreation department of Oak Bay for the first 11 months of 1976, and the budget for 1977. These are operating statements, and do not include debt servicing, which must itself be formidable. The overall loss for 11 months of 1976 is $640,309.25. Projected for 12 months this would be close to $700,000.

A large proportion of this must be attributed to the recreation centre, and if we examine the figures more closely, we find a loss from the ice arena, the curling, and the aquatic programs of $198,058.88. (Projected for twelve months, $216,064.) Add to this a loss in the social lounge of $15,291.57, and we have a figure of $213,350.45, which projects to $232,746. The estimated loss budgeted for 1977 for the ice arena, the curling, and the aquatics program is $194,889.

To these figures I would have to add a proportion of the administrative costs, which are budgeted at $213,850. All these costs (the total budgeted excess of expenditure over income for 1977 is $603,260.00) have to be borne by the taxpayer of Oak Bay.

These figures need some comment.

Subsidies for certain types of recreation and certain classes of people are absolutely justifiable, but should not the extent of these subsidies be defined? The present financial arrangements are extremely loose, and there is very little inducement to economize. It is difficult enough to extract the figures from the budget and the financial statement, because expenditures and revenues are listed on different pages and under different headings. No private company would be permitted to produce such a statement for its shareholders.

There is a tendency for recreational centres to compete against each other for customers. If, for example, the Oak Bay centre were to increase its charges for some activities, some people might be driven away to Esquimalt or Victoria. Is this a good argument against attempting to charge enough to cover acceptable costs?

It is ironic that private clubs, which operate at no cost to the taxpayer, have to take into consideration all their debt servicing, have to live within their means; these are heavily taxed by municipalities, presumably for the privilege of being self-supporting.

If the Oak Bay council is really attempting to control its tax increases, they must give us some better accounting, and some more stringent controls over expenses of this type. Incidentally, would council like to inform the taxpayer just what our new recreational facilities do cost per year in debt servicing? Could it be as high as $100,000?

Control Myth

I hate making a nuisance of myself, but I would appreciate it if one of your editors would explain to me the controls on prices that you featured on the front page of the Feb. 2 Times (Lifting the Controls By Early 1978?)

Those which the minister opined that he would continue into 1978, the same controls that our B.C. premier, later in the day an interview on television rather piously said he would enforce himself if they were dropped by the federal government.

In the last five years all my immediate services have increased by, at a minimum, at least 15 per cent.

Ferry rates by 300 per cent. From $1 weekdays to $4. My car from $5 to $10. My medicare increased by 50 per cent. My car insurance by 100 per cent. My taxes by 25 per cent.

Property and housing one thousand per cent, and that is an incredible minimum! Mortgages and loans are almost criminally usurious.

Clothing is 50 per cent higher than it was five years ago; in many instances more!

Food, looking at the whole, is easily 25 per cent more than five years ago. A chocolate bar, Dad, is 20 per cent higher this week than last. Tell me about those controls!

Even the sales tax went up 40 per cent.

Buy a pair of glasses, have your teeth seen to, go out to dinner — stay in to dinner, buy a boat if you have the money and the nerve, take a trip in British Columbia, stay in a hotel for a night, take out your girl friend or your mistress, or even your wife, for a night on the town; buy a cigar, a penny match which was the only thing left in our society which could be purchased by a cent, and gave us courage for the new day, has gone too.

When you have done one or any of these things, paid your services up to date, will you please explain to me all about those price controls and stuff? Please speak slowly and clearly as I don't want to miss a single thing. — H. Dundas, 142 Bushby Street.

Enormous Increases

It is incredible to me that when the province is suffering with so much distress and unemployment and when so many essential services are being curtailed we read of the enormous increases and benefits which have been given to some 1,300 top provincial civil servants. It is immaterial that the AIB approved the increases where some civil servants will receive very large bonus payments and other benefits.

The premier and the minister of finance speak of restraints and yet they are party to the higher paid echelons of the civil service receiving very large increases which are retroactive to April 1, 1974. The previous government and the AIB must also share their responsibilities in this action which is particularlily distressing to many who are trying to make ends meet and the unemployed.

I believe that civil servants should be well and adequately paid but surely this is not the moment to introduce such large increases and retroactive pay as far back as April 1, 1974. There is no truer saying than that the rich get richer and the poor more poor. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 301—1701 Cedar Hill XRoad.

Blatant Propaganda

The Victoria Real Estate Board has seen fit to print an entire page in your Feb. 5 edition, which purports to be a speech by a Professor Lawrence B. Smith of the University of Toronto at a 1976 convention of the Canadian real estate convention in Quebec City.

Obviously the statistics are those of the province of Quebec and bear no relation whatever to prices and conditions in B.C. Obviously also, the speaker, an associate chairman of the department of political economy, is stating his personal views and no doubt slanting his conclusions to his real estate audience.

Responsible thinking people of this region who are aware of the price of housing and cost of rentals here know full well that this is blatant propaganda and misrepresentation that should be investigated. As well, it is a blind to conceal the large share of fault for the insanely escalated price of land and houses in this region that lies squarely with the Victoria Real Estate Board and the industry. — Pro Bono Publico.

Petty Issue

Concerning the allowance of nude swimming at the UVic pool, I am surprised at how such a minor issue can call for so much public attention and speculation on legalities, since there is, inherently, nothing wrong with swimming in the nude.

It is not sexual, it is not self-degrading and it is not immoral. It is not even polluting anything, including the mind.

Moreover, nude swimming is overwhelmingly popular in many other countries, Norway, Germany, France, Sweden, and has been for generations. Those who do not like it do not have to do it.

People should be more concerned with actual problems which represent true dangers — oil spills and industrial pollution — and stop lending importance to petty social sensationalsim. — B. Henin, MSc., 2750 Gosworth Road.

Some Big Names Put Down Some Even Bigger Names

FREUD

With a shattering of reputations, The Times Literary Supplement of Gray's Inn Road, London, has just come out with its 75th anniversary issue. The reverberations should keep the Oxbridge dons and erudite readers firing off letters to the editor, the mild-mannered John Gross, for the rest of 1977.

As part of the air of gamesmanship that often appears between the lines of the reviews, poems, commentary and softsell advertisements of the TLS (a case of nickname becoming a real one on the masthead), the editor asked several dozen of his writers, scholars and artists to nominate "the most underrated and overrated books or authors" since the first issue appeared on Jan. 17, 1902, as part of The Times of London.

With characteristic generosity — at least since writing his own first, forgotten novel—John K. Galbraith says that Ring Lardner was underrated because he was a former sports writer.

He also puts John O'Hara's Appointment in Samarra in a class with anything by F. Scott Fitzgerald. Overrated: George Orwell.

Arnold Toynbee comes off poorly in the survey.

"His Study of History is neither history nor a study," says the historian A. J. P. Taylor. M. I. Finley also says that Toynbee has not earned the right to be called a "philosopher of civilization."

TOLSTOY

Rebecca West, who began to write criticism in England about the year Tolstoy died (1910), says the Russian novelist is overrated.

"His Anna Karenina appears to be sheer nonsense," Miss West says. "Young girls in love for the first time in their lives do not go to their first ball in a state of lust which would have done credit to the heartier class of hussar."

The lively Miss West, at the age of 84, says that many unnamed books are underrated because of poor reviewing or are not reviewed at all "because the authors do not belong to the caste that wears the right ring in their nose."

Christopher Isherwood says that "for what has been made of them, rather than for what they were," the most overrated is Freud, the most underrated, Jung.

Anthony Burgess, never a mincer of opinions, says that the most overrated French writer is Andre Gide; German writer, Hermann Hesse, and British writer, E. M. Forster.

TOYNBEE
. . . no philosopher, he

In another 75 years or less, he thinks these writers will be considered "excessively esteemed"; Saul Bellow, Kurt Vonnegut Jr., Iris Murdoch and Aleksandr I. Solzhenitsyn.

But he regards Conrad Aiken as the most underrated American writer.

After calling Malraux and Teilhard de Chardin "great charlatans," Hugh Trevor-Roper, an Oxford slugger, notes: "I consider the whole Bloomsbury group — excepting J. M. Keynes — to be the most overrated literary phenomenon of our times. Above all, Lytton Strachey, whose only achievement was to trivialize history . . . to raise a few complacent titters form the radical chic of his time."

Robert Lowell says the military historian J. F. C. Fuller is as good as Bertrand Russell. Michael Dummett believes C. P. Snow's The Masters is overrated while, in Britain, Ralph Ellison's The Invisible Man is underrated.

And so it goes, with somewhat more dislikes than likes, which is the critical prerogative.

Chemical War on Weeds, Bugs Not Worth the Cost?

By DAN MORGAN
and PETER MILIUS
Washington Post

Fourteen years after Rachel Carson called attention to the perils of pesticides in Silent Spring, the United States is using about twice as much poison against insects and weeds as it was then.

The pesticide industry is a growth sector of the American economy — a $2.6 billion a year business which produces one billion pounds of chemicals for use at home and another 600 million pounds for countries abroad.

Moreover, the chemical warfare against pests has been rapidly spreading around the world, as less-developed, tropical countries turn to the pesticides to combat devastating diseases and increase their lagging food production.

For those nations, the United States is the major pesticide arsenal and dominates the $7 billion a year global market in the chemicals.

Big Business

Many of the country's best-known industrial giants are involved in the making and trading of the poisons: Dow Chemical, Eli Lilly, Du Pont, Monsanto, Shell, and Chevron, to name a few. And the scope of this international business is indicated by the fact that one firm, American Cyanimid, reportedly sold nearly half a billion dollars worth of agricultural chemiclas worldwide in 1974.

To the policy makers who have to make the ultimate decisions about the use of these poisons, the spread of pesticides around the world poses questions to which there are no simple answers.

Many countries rely on the United States to guide them in selecting compounds which are safe and effective. Yet in the U.S., there is still widespread disagreement about what, in fact, is safe. Recent controversies involving the insecticides kepone and leptophos illustrate the nightmarish difficulties faced by the regulators. Both of these nerve-attacking chemicals have been linked to illnesses of workers at plants where they were made.

Since 1970, the Environmental Protection Agency has had the task in the U.S. of weighing the potential harm against the benefits of such chemicals. But EPA is a new agency, which has only begun to review fully the impact of dozens of substances upon our lives and health. Scientists say that almost all substances are potentially poisonous if used in certain ways and in certain amounts. In determining what serves the general good, the regulators are operating in the murkiest of areas, with evidence that is, at best, tentative.

Some pesticides can and do kill or cripple people when they are improperly manufactured or used. Their potential for causing delayed illnesses, perhaps years from now in people exposed to them, is a matter of intense scientific investigation.

What is hotly at issue in the often emotional debate over pesticides is whether it is worth risking some lives in order to achieve economical or medical objectives which may save others from death, illness or malnutrition.

For instance, is it worth risking the lives of chemical workers in the U.S. so that farmers in Egypt can produce an abundant cotton crop and themselves avoid death from starvation and disease?

National priorities play a powerful role in pesticide decisions. Improper use of the common pesticide malathion last summer caused at least five deaths and an estimated 2,900 illnesses in Pakistan. But the government has ordered the spraying against mosquitoes again next year to stop a feared resurgence of malaria.

In many poor countries, the environmental movement's concern about pesticides has been viewed, until recently, as a luxury of the rich.

Farmers

Pesticides have been used abroad in public health programs to fight yellow fever, typhus, malaria, river blindness, Chagas disease and numerous other illnesses spread by mosquitoes, tsetse flies, black flies, ticks and snails in dozens of countries.

There is no question that the pesticides have also aided farmers abroad who face fearful losses from pests. The Bayer Chemical Co. of West Germany has estimated that locust swarms capable of eating as much as 3,000 tons of food a day cause $1 billion in crop losses in Africa and South Asia every year.

A $7 billion a year global business

One of the strongest defenders of the use of chemicals against such pests has been the U.S. Agency for International Development, which has financed the export of over half a billion dollars worth of pesticide chemicals since 1957.

AID estimates pesticides can increase farmers' yields by an average of 40 per cent.

For all those admitted benefits, however, scientists, environmentalists, and, increasingly, public officials, have begun to raise serious questions about the global chemical war on weeds and insects.

Efforts to regulate the use of the poisons worldwide and, more important, to gauge their long-term impact in different climates and in different cultures, are in their infancy. Only late last year did AID, prodded by environmental groups, draw up a report assessing the impact of its own international "pest management" programs in foregin countries.

Leptophos, the nerve-attacking compound that was recently linked to illnesses among workers at the Bayport, Texas plant which makes it, is currently being used against plant insects in Mexico, Indonesia, Taiwan and possibly other countries.

Japan forbids the use in its own country of a pesticide compound called ortho-chlorophenyl carbamate, but sells it to Taiwan. At the same time, Japan has strict laws against importing American citrus fruit treated with OPP and TBZ, fungicides which delay molding and rotting — yet traces of those chemicals are allowed on fruit sold in the United States.

Banned in 1972

The insecticide DDT was banned in the U.S. in 1972, yet it continues to be widely used abroad, and the Montrose Chemical Co. plant in Torrence, Calif., continues to make it for sale abroad.

In 1975, 12 countries received four million tons of U.S.-made DDT. Moreover, many countries not only defend its use in agriculture and against malarial mosquitoes but are taking steps to boost their own production. India is building a new DDT plant, and the substance is widely manufactured in the Soviet Union, France, Italy, East Germany, Poland, Romania, Pakistan, Mexico, Brazil and Argentina.

Environmentalists are growing more concerned about the impact of such trends.

"Nobody will deny the benefits of pesticides in increasing food production, but there is a serious problem when they are used indiscriminately," says Maureen Hinkle, of the Environmental Defence Fund.

Until last January, when AID agreed to suspend financing overseas shipments of a number of questionable pesticides, the agency had subsidized the overseas sale of DDT, BHC, endrin, heptachlor, chlordane and leptophos.

Environmentalists complained that AID had been insenstive to findings about these pesticides, all but leptophos are members of the chlorinated hydrocarbon family of chemicals. Their use has been banned or severely limited in the United States.

Some scientists question whether the use of some powerful poisons abroad do more good than harm, even when they combat devastating diseases.

Robert Metcalf, professor of entymology at the University of Illinois, claims that the insecticide deildrin has poisoned hundreds of people in Central America and left them suffering from periodic convulsions when it was used against "kissing bugs."

These bugs live in the cracks of houses and spread Chagas disease, an incurable, debilitating infection related to African sleeping sickness. Metcalf estimates that 20 to 30 per cent of the deildrin spray crews have been poisoned while fighting the bugs.

Metcalf and some of his fellow scientists say resistance to the chemcial poisons is building up in insect populations. In the United States, they have noticed a resurgence of house flies. In Sri Lanka, DDT use was discontinued several years ago because mosquitoes were becoming resistant to the spraying, and malaria has again reached epidemic proportions in that country.

Methyl parathion, an organophosphate chemical, has been substituted for DDT in crops with considerable success. But the substance is extremely dangerous when mishandled, and there is evidence of increasing insect resistance to it.

According to David Pimentel, professor of entymology at Cornell, farmers in Central America who used to spray their cotton with chemicals eight times a season have had to increase the spraying to 40 times. They use "chemical cocktails" of parathion, DDT, toxaphene, and other substances. But still the attacking weevils and insects survive.

"Unless we change our ways of using these chemicals — unless we make more judicious use of them, I would think we are in grave danger of exhausting their effectiveness. There won't be any effective ones left in 10 to 20 years," says Metcalf.

Pimentel insists that if pesticides were eliminated altogether, "We wouldn't starve."

A Winter's Night Encounter

By GARY LAUTENS

Walking home from work I often bump into a man in a gray car coat, no hat or gloves, shoulders hunched against the wind, face ravaged by booze.

He patrols the same few blocks and usually asks for spare change or, on occasion, he makes a more specific request, "Would you have 12 cents?" or, "I just need a dime."

You press a few coins in his hand and he says, "thanks," and is on his way.

A couple of weeks ago he appeared with his face a mass of welts, two black eyes, and he needed a stick to stand up because of a bad leg. Somebody had worked him over, given him the boots, beaten him to take his change, or perhaps his bottle of wine. It's that kind of world he lives in.

Mind you, he's a fair size — over six feet — and he could be in his early 30s, although too much has happened to him to make that any more than a guess.

Regardless of size and age, he was an obvious loser.

Last week, on the coldest day of the winter, I was going up the street and there on the sidewalk a half block ahead was the familiar hulking figure. He was talking to a warmly dressed older man.

As I approached, the elderly man walked away, leaving the . . . well, what would you call him: Derelict? Bum? Panhandler? Wino? . . . leaving him at any rate on the corner.

Automatically reached in my coat pocket and all the change I could come up with was 22 cents, and it was too cold to unbutton and reach into my trouser pocket for more. It would have to do.

"How's it going?" I asked as I put the money in his hand.

"I just found out my mother's dead," he said, looking into my face. "That man told me my mother just died."

He looked stunned.

Somehow I felt embarrassed about sharing such a personal moment with the man, and I only managed to say, "It's going to be a tough day."

"It's going to be a tough day for a long time," he replied, and the conversation was over.

I went on my way, and so did he, but I've thought about him a lot since then.

Was he once a boy with hopes and dreams, report cards and shiny face, warm mitts and good suppers, a boy who got kisses at night and a bedtime story?

Where does he put his head down now — in a doorway, under a bridge protected from the wind by stone abutments, in a cell? When did it go wrong? Does he get an occasional laugh, is this the way he wanted it? What keeps him going?

Was he ever able to cope?

Who knows? Maybe the man himself can't remember, or chooses not to.

But here was a human being enduring a hard moment — the loss of his mother — and having no one to share it with but a stranger putting 22 cents in his hand.

It isn't an easy thing to put out of your mind, not on a bleak January night when you've got so many blessings yourself.

Excess Profit Firms Publicized by AIB

OTTAWA (CP) — The anti-inflation board Tuesday released the names of 124 companies with total excess revenues of $13,055,000 that the board says have agreed to freeze or reduce prices to dispose of the money.

The companies were reviewed by the board between Nov. 23 last year and Jan. 14. Since the anti-inflation program started in October, 1975, the board has named 293 companies with total excess revenues of more than $28 million.

The board refuses to say that the excess revenues represent excessive profits, but it does say that excess revenues are produced only if a company charges mor than its allowable profit margin under the anti-inflation guides.

The board says in a statement that most of the excess revenues the 124 companies earned occurred in the early months of the anti-inflation program. In most cases, the companies have already either frozen or reduced prices to meet the anti-inflation guides.

Of the companies, 90 froze their prices and absorbed rising costs to get rid of the excess revenue, seven companies cut prices and 27 used a combination of price cuts, discounts or customer refunds as well as absorbing costs.

The board statement does not name the companies that cut prices, but the list of company names was released at a news conference in Montreal.

All the companies named agreed to let the board publish their names, but not all agreed to make public the amount of excess revenue they earned.

Companies with excess revenues of more than $10,000 each that agreed to publish the amount of excess revenue earned included:

Agra Foods Ltd., Burnaby, $18,000; Alcan Aluminum Ltd., Montreal, $14,000; Allis Chalmers Canada Ltd., Lachine, Que., $36,000; Allis Chalmers Rumely Ltd., Lachine, Que., $161,000.

Total excess revenues of the 51 companies in this category was $4,123,407.

The companies with excess revenues of more than $10,000 each, for a total of $8,765,000 among the 41, but refused to reveal the exact amount of excess that each earned included:

More Firms Must Warn Of Hikes

OTTAWA (CP) — The anti-inflation board has raised to 298 from 274 the number of companies required to give 30 days advance warning of price increases.

The companies will in future also have to give notice of smaller increases than required now, the board said in a news release.

The pre-notification procedure is designed to allow the board to monitor significant price increases to ensure companies will not generate "excess revenue."

The new list of firms required to give advance notice includes 85 companies not previously listed. Another 61 were dropped from the old list because of changing conditions, the board said.

Companies listed represented about $70 billion in annual sales.

The new reporting rules require that listed companies give notice of proposed price increases that will raise projected annual revenue from domestic sales of the product line by more than 1.5 per cent and which will mean price increases of more than six per cent for an individual product.

The previous limit on productline revenue was two per cent.

Insurance RRSP Criticized

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Stay away from insurance companies when buying registered retirement savings plans, says Ontario financial writer W. E. McLeod.

Their interest rates are low, their charges are high and their life annuities are no bargain, he said.

McLeod is author of a Self Counsel paperback entitled Tax Savings Plans in Canada and is chairman of the Cambrian College business department in Sudbury, Ont.

He was in Victoria Monday as part of a cross-Canada speaking tour.

He said in an interview he has been criticized in Ontario by spokesmen for insurance companies for his outspoken remarks but has not altered his stand.

"Some rednecks in the insurance industry have been very hostile but others are willing to debate in a reasonable manner. My point is simply that insurance companies are not offering a good deal and some of their quoted rates are misleading.

"The best deal in registered retirement savings plans come from credit unions. trust companies are second and banks third. People should shop around and try to find the best deal but they should stay away from the insurance companies."

McLeod said some insurance companies have loading charges as high as 40 per cent on some of their retirement plans. They don't mention these charges when they quote the interest rate, he said.

McLeod has been battling a federal law which says only a life insurance company can offer a life annuity.

"All companies selling registered retirement savings plans should have the same right under the law. Credit unions have earned the right to provide life annuities for those who want them."

McLeod has been working through the Consumer Association of Canada to change the law. At present anyone with a registered retirement savings plan must turn the fund into a life annuity at age 71. He may also buy a life annuity before that age but in any case must deal with an insurance company.

The annuities pay a fixed monthly amount as long as the person lives. The insurance companies have been criticized because in many cases only a small part of the investment is returned to the investor before he dies, McLeod said.

Because they are a bad deal, nobody should be compelled by law to buy one, McLeod said. And, while they should be optional, they should be available from all types of financial institutions, not just life insurance companies.

Under existing laws, the best way to withdraw funds from a registered retirement savings plan is to remove it piecemeal, he said.

For example, a person who retires at age 60 with a total of $25,000 in the fund could turn it into two plans, one for $5,000 and one for $20,000 and then cancel the $5,000 plan taking the cash. The $5,000 is subject to income tax in the year it is received.

He could continue to divide and withdraw funds in this way until the whole $25,000 is gone. After age 65, federal pensions and company pensions come into effect.

RRSP Dodge Crackdown

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal tax investigators say they are cracking down on taxpayers using loopholes in registered savings plans to avoid millions of dollars in income tax every year.

A Revenue Canada official said in an interview the department is about to pounce on several hundred persons who have been using a wrinkle in the law covering registered retirement savings plans to escape tax.

But he said there is little the department can do to stop an unknown number of persons who have turned another program designed to help young people save for a home into a lucrative tax dodge. This is done simply by changing ownership of a home they own over to the spouse's name.

Both loopholes were created in November, 1974, when John Turner, then minister of finance, introduced changes in regulations to permit establishment of a retirement savings plan on behalf of a spouse and created the registered home ownership savings plan.

Both programs are vigorously promoted by banks and trust companies at this time of year because deposits must be paid into the plans by March 1 in order to qualify as a tax deduction on last year's income.

Retirement savings plans are a form of personal retirement savings program offered by financial institutions with varying rates of investment return. Contributions into the plans up to set limits may be deducted from taxable income, thus reducing final taxes paid.

But with the introduction of the provision for purchasing a retirement plan on behalf of a spouse, many taxpayers took out a plan on behalf of the marital partner with the lowest income. The tax deduction was claimed and the plan was cashed soon afterwards. Since the plan becomes the property of the lower-income spouse for whom it was set up, taxes paid on it would be at a lower rate.

The technique was merely a way of transferring income into a lower tax bracket, repeating the routine each year indefinitely.

Permanent Income Up

The Permanent reports net operating income for 1976 of $16.4 million or $2.30 per share, up 14 per cent from 1975, Victoria branch manager H. A. Manson said today.

The trust company had total income of $326 million, up 28 per cent. Most of the increase was due to interest, dividends and net real estate commissions.

Consolidated assets grew by $544 million to $3.25 billion, up 29 per cent from $2.7 billion. The mortgage portfolio increased 19 per cent to $2.5 billion. The main source of funds for mortgages came from term deposits, which totalled $3 billion at year's end, up 20 per cent from the previous December.

An additional $44,000 was earned by the company through the sale of assets.

The outlook for 1977 is strong, Manson said, because the reduction in interest rates can be expected to have a favorable effect on the spread between borrowing and lending.

Lockheed Aircraft Earnings Decline

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp., plagued by payoff scandals and a multimillion dollar debt, reported its net earnings in 1976 dropped to $38.7 million compared to $45.3 million in 1975.

Lockheed said sales for 1976 totaled $3.2 billion, down slightly from the $3.39 billion of the previous year.

The company is in the middle of a controversy over commissions paid to foreign officials and agents and faces a debt of $450 million, including $100 million guaranteed by the U.S. government.

Earnings per share of common stock for 1976 were reported at $3.10 compared to $3.86 for 1975.

In accordance with a change in L1011 Tristar accounting initiated in the fourth quarter of 1975, earnings for 1976 also reflect a full year's amortization of the commercial transport program's planning and tooling and production start-up costs at an annual rate of $50 million.

Losses on the Tristar program during the year were $125.8 million compared to $93.8 million in 1975.

Lockheed reported earnings for the fourth quarter of 1976 were 50 cents per share compared with 68 cents in 1975.

Lockheed said that during 1976 it signed $3.37 billion in orders for new and follow-on business, of which approximately $2.09 billion or 63 per cent was U.S. government orders.

Surplus of Graduates Unavoidable: Educator

Economic conditions change so quickly it is almost impossible to avoid producing surplus graduates when a recession comes, University of Victoria school of social work chairman Brian Wharf said today.

He was responding to criticism by Canada Manpower regional manager Stan Purdy that technical schools and universities continue to churn out trained people when many of them will face unemployment.

Wharf said an economic survey in 1973 showed British Columbia needed 75 additional social workers per year. This was at a time when University of B.C. was turning out only 30.

Now the capacity has doubled with 30 in Vancouver and 30 in Victoria and the market can not absorb them all, Wharf said.

"Nobody could have foreseen the widespread unemployment among social workers."

The Canada Manpower study showed there are 62 social workers unemployed in Victoria. In addition there are 130 jobless teachers, 42 unemployed university instructors and 45 registered nurses.

Wharf said the UVic school of social work has reacted to the new economic conditions by restricting enrolment to 30. In addition, they will be doing their summer practical work in relatively isolated areas like Terrace, Prince George and Nelson. The students are being told that, if they are willing to work in these areas, they have an excellent chance of finding employment when they graduate.

"I would think that just about all 30 will find jobs, assuming they graduate. But the jobs will be outside the main urban areas of the province."

Wharf said most of the UBC graduates would be seeking work in the Lower Mainland and will not compete for up-country jobs with the UVic graduates.

The school of social work is a new department at UVic and the first graduating class will be in 1978.

Earlier, the UVic faculty of education said it is beginning to limit enrolment for prospective teachers but graduates will face stiff competition for jobs from UBC grads where more than 4,000 students are registered and enrolment is not limited.

A UVic education spokesman said some teachers voluntarily decide to be unemployed because they do not want to move to isolated areas or would find it inconvenient to move because their husbands (or wives) are employed in the Victoria area.

ELOQUENT RATEPAYER CURBS ROAD PROGRAM

Alfred Jenner, of 882 Swan, took the committee to task for considering a local improvement bylaw he contends is unfair to single-family homeowners.

The bylaw would permit road improvements on Swan with single-family homeowners being charged $63 a year for 20 years.

Because the levy is based on front footage, condominium owners on the street would pay only $27.50 a year.

Jenner said this is unfair to residents like himself who have been paying taxes for 22 years.

"This is the only part of Canada I own and you're not going to take it away from me," he told the aldermen.

Jenner said the only work done on Swan since he bought his home 22 years ago was the laying of pea gravel.

"And it cost me $18 dollars," he said. "We (Swan residents) filled in the ditches. We didn't let you know. You weren't doing anything. All the old boilers in Victoria are there."

Ald. David Paterson noted that people bought condominiums in order to cut down such costs as levies for roadwork but Ald. Ian Cass argued in Jenner's favor.

Unable to reach a decision, the committee agreed to refer the matter back to council. Meanwhile, municipal solicitor Doug Patterson will be asked whether Saanich can decide not to act on the petition, signed en bloc by the condominium dwellers.

Irish Push Torture Allegations

STRASBOURG (Reuter) — Ireland said today it will press on with allegations of torture against Britain before an international tribunal here despite a British pledge never to use the disputed interrogation methods again.

British Attorney-General Sam Silkin gave the pledge Tuesday in an effort to persuade Ireland to drop its case before the European Human Rights Court.

Irish Attorney-General Declan Costello told the court his government welcomed the British pledge, but he added: "It does not in itself constitute a sufficient reason why the court should not exercise its jurisdiction and confirm the European Human Rights Commission's findings in relation to the undisputed part of the case."

Silkin said Tuesday that Britain was not contesting the commission findings that British security forces in Ulster violated the Human Rights Convention, which forbids torture.

affairs, however, denies such advice was given.

He said although Canadian authorities were aware in October—that a Canadian had been arrested in Martinique, the person's name was not known until after Mrs. Clouston's call.

"Then," he said, "we put two and two together."

Mrs. Clouston said she has received several letters from her son.

He writes he is sharing a cell with his co-accused, that the food is "just enough to live on" and that there are only two other prisoners who can speak English.

"He tries to be cheerful," she said. "He doesn't want me to worry."

Gary, an engineer with the Canadian Coast Guard, says letters he has received are "filled with a desperation and frustration" over how long everything is taking and the fact no formal charge has yet been laid.

Mrs. Clouston said her son left Victoria on July 2 taking with him his savings—a little over $7,000.

Three weeks later he wrote to say he'd bought the Antinea, a two-masted wooden yawl, for $6,000 at Antigua.

She said he spent the next two months learning how to sail the boat by cruising around the northern end of the Leeward Islands.

While stopping over at the tiny French island of St. Barthelemy, he was approached by a man who wanted to charter the boat. Clouston agreed.

The man had a number of boxes which he said contained his personal effects. Clouston apparently didn't question him.

The man said he wanted to sail south. The directions were vague but there was some suggestion the destination was Barbados, Mrs. Clouston said.

They'd travelled about 200 miles when they ran into a howling storm.

"It was the worst he'd ever seen," Mrs. Clouston said her son wrote.

The boat sprang a leak and Clouston decided to make for Fort-de-France. He had a good shipyard on an island south of Martinique but needed a map to show him the way.

He docked the Antinea late at night. The next morning customs officials came on board.

"Russ just about freaked out when he saw what was inside those boxes," Gary said.

The antinea was impounded and her cargo seized.

Mrs. Clouston said it was her son's intention to spend a year or two in the West Indies and then sail the boat to Victoria and sell it.

She said before leaving, he studied sailing, world cruising and navigation at Camosun College. Last April he obtained his 250-ton coastal B.C. Master's certificate.

Prior to 1975, Clouston worked in Vancouver for about eight years as entertainment director and drummer in a band at Isy's night club.

An official who answered the phone said no one could speak with the prisoner.

"What about tomorrow?" the overseas operator asked in French.

Self-Professed Train Buff Heads BCR Inquiry

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 58-year-old self-professed train buff will head the three-man royal commission of inquiry into the operations of the B.C. railway.

Mr. Justice Lloyd McKenzie, a B.C. Supreme Court judge since 1974, says he has been a train buff since his childhood days in Penticton.

"It was a big event in our day when the Kettle Valley train arrived each evening," the judge said in an interview Tuesday, shortly after Premier Bill Bennett announced the commission during a special news conference.

Mr. Justice McKenzie said he has travelled extensively on trains but never on the B.C. Railway.

Also named in the order-in-council establishing the commission were Dave Chapman, B.C. regional director of the federal Anti-Inflation Board, and Syd Welsh, president of Premier Cablevision.

The judge said he regards the job as a Herculean task that will probably take at least two months to get started.

He said the commission will have to examine not only operations of the railway, but also the effects on the provincial economy.

He said the commission probably will have to hire engineers, economists, accountants and other experts.

The judge said his task appears similar to that of the McKenzie Valley pipeline commission, except that his inquiry is to look at an existing utility and to decide if it is functioning efficiently.

Mr. Justice McKenzie said he has no political affiliation.

"In 1918, my father was Conservative MLA for Similkameen, but he had a sense of humor and named me after a certain Liberal (British) prime minister for whom he had some admiration," the judge said.

In 1963, while practising law in Victoria, Mr. Justice McKenzie was appointed legal adviser to the provincial public accounts committee during an investigation of alleged graft in the highways department.

Chapman, 50, said in Ottawa Tuesday his appointment to the commission means he will resign his AIB post.

He said he hopes his premature departure from the board will not contribute to an early end to the federal wage and price control program.

"I would not say the job is done," said Chapman, who has headed the AIB office in Vancouver for the last year. "It's only partially completed. Somebody else should have the opportunity to do this job."

He said AIB recommendations to Finance Minister Donald Macdonald have "to a large extent been adopted" but a lot will depend on the position taken by the provinces.

Premier Benett has objected to an early end to wage and price controls, but pressed Chapman to accept his new job.

Chapman said he originally turned down Bennett's offer to serve on the royal commission but reconsidered following a personal phone call from the premier Monday night.

"I dislike leaving because the AIB has been both challenging and interesting," he said. "However, this new assignment will be challenging, too."

Chapman, said he expects to begin work on the commission sometime next month, although he has not yet officially resigned from his AIB post.

Welsh, 63, is chairman of the board of Premier Cablevision. He launched the company in 1958 as Vancouver Cablevision and built it up to the second-biggest cable TV system in America.

He is a past president of the Vancouver Board of Trade and a past president of the B.C. Contractors' Association.

Under the terms of the commission's mandate, the inquiry will include an examination of:

—The relationship of the railway to the economic and social well-being of the province;

—The foreseeable financial requirements of the railway for all purposes;

—The railway's over-all operation and accounting procedures;

Mouths at 50 Paces Duel Agreed by Kempf and Lea

Mouths at 50 paces were the weapons chosen Tuesday for a verbal duel between Jack Kempf (SC—Omineca) and Graham Lea, (NDP—Prince Rupert) over a B.C. highways construction contract recently let to an Edmonton-based company.

Lea, highways minister in the former NDP government, said during debate on economic development ministry estimates that the government awarded a $3.4 million highway construction contract to North American Roads Ltd. while 112,000 people are unemployed in B.C.

Lea made the comments after Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said the Social credit government intends to create jobs through a highways construction program.

"Charity begins at home," said Lea.

"You're on," shouted Kempf. "Anytime."

Asked outside the legislature about the choice of weapons, Lea replied: "Mouths at 50 paces. And if it's going to be big mouths at 50 paces, I've lost the debate before we go."

Kempf told reporters he couldn't set a specific date for the debate but it would probably be held after the current session.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two men were remanded until today after appearing in Victoria provincial court Tuesday charged with a total of six break-ins in Greater Victoria.

Guy Philip Legasse, 20, of Winnipeg, and Fredrick James Leppanen, 19, who told police he was from Winnipeg and Vancouver, were jointly charged with a Feb. 4 break-in at Crestwood Cabinets, 141 Skinner. In addition, Leppanen is charged in connection with five other break-ins and Legasse three others.

Both were remanded in custody until today, when they are expected to elect trial method and plead.

A 26-year-old woman who chased two men from a bus stop in the 1300-block Pandora with a letter opener Tuesday morning, pleaded guilty to possession of a dangerous weapon.

Marilyn Eleanor Hildebrand, who told Judge Harold Alder she lived on Ladysmith Street, was remanded in custody until Thursday for pre-sentence and psychiatric reports before sentence.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court the woman brandished a 4½-inch "dagger-type knife" which turned out to be a letter opener and chased two men.

She told victoria city police she was looking for two men who had stolen money from her and her husband.

A 27-year-old Nanaimo man was remanded in custody following a bail hearing Tuesday on charges of possession of MDA and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

Donald Cyril Tomey elected trial by judge and jury on the trafficking charge and was remanded until today to set dates for a preliminary hearing and trial.

★ ★ ★

Michael Woods, 26, of Terrace, changed his plea to guilty on 10 counts of unemployment insurance fraud and was fined $100 on each count and ordered to pay back $1,851 to the Unemployment Insurance Commission within 18 months.

Court was told Woods was employed in Victoria and drawing wages of $130 a week as well as $93 a week in UIC benefits between March and July, 1974.

It was Woods' second conviction for UIC fraud but legal-aid lawyer Jasper Bomhof argued that the april, 1975, conviction for $465 in untitled benefits — for which he was fined $450 — was part of a continuing chain of offences and should not be considered separately.

★ ★ ★

A 23-year-old woman returned recently from Toronto to face seven charges, totalling 23 counts of false pretences valued at approximately $8,500 in worthless cheques, had two more similar charges added Tuesday.

Joann Beatrice Ralfs was charged with obtaining television sets valued at $811,06 and $384.15 with worthless cheques last July.

She elected trial by judge and jury and was remanded one week to set a preliminary hearing date.

★ ★ ★

A 20-year-old charged with three counts of wilful damage i connection with tire-slashing incidents Tuesday in Esquimalt was remanded until a week Tuesday without plea.

Rob Hugh Castell, of 4668 Cordova Bay Road, was charged with slashing four tires on Esquimalt Road and Head Street.

Esquimalt police said reinforcements had to be called in from Victoria after a group of youths caught a man slashing tires. A total of 10 officers was needed before peace could be restored and the man taken into custody.

★ ★ ★

Court was told he was stopped by Saanich police on Feb. 5 on Marigold and on Feb. 8 on Saanich Road.

The first time, he told police he was driving a friend home and the second time he told officers he was driving to work. Police ascertained he worked about half a mile from where he lived.

His licence was suspended for two months Jan. 13 because of a poor driving record, court was told.

Alder fined Jones $100 on each count.

Sludge

It Goes Out With Our Sewage But Others Make Good Use of It

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Is the Capital district pouring a treasure into the ocean every day along with its sewage? If not a treasure, at least something which would help your garden grow?

Sewage treatment plants in Washington, D.C., harvest 600 tons of dried sewage sludge a day. Mixed with wood chips, it's going to be given away free later this year for farmers, parks, nurseries and maybe homeowners.

It's the world's largest mother lode of odor-free almost sterile organic mulch and the word from Washington is flowers and vegetables love it.

It will be available at Washington's Blue Plains sewage treatment plant on the Potomac River in loose piles, at several suburban locations, and if it proves popular it may even be bagged and sold cheaply outside the Washington area.

A market survey now being completed for the metropolitan Washington council of governments has found that the peat-like compost will be so popular, whether given away or sold at low cost, that even in 1980 when Blue Plains alone will be producing 1,800 tons of sludge a day there will be no problem getting rid of it.

"This is good quality sludge compost compared with other cities and we've done hundreds of analyses," says Dr. James Parr, chief of the biological waste management laboratory nearby.

"It's very exceptional compost for use in gardens. I use it in my flower pots and my colleagues use it in flower and vegetable gardens. I would too, but I'm not a gardener."

The only major reservations about the use of composted sewage sludge in Washington gardens concerns the presence of heavy metals (zinc, copper, cadmium and lead) or micro-organisms like salmonella which can cause food poisoning.

The seven-week composting process, where organic decay raised temperatures above 150 degree Fahrenheit, kills virtually all salmonella and most other bacteria, leaving the compost odor free and almost sterile.

"It's still possible to locate salmonella in low numbers from time to time in the compost," says soil microbiologist Wylie Burge, "but I don't think it constitutes a hazard and I'm not afraid to use this compost in the vegetable garden."

So much for the Washington experience. There's a basic problem duplicating it in Greater Victoria — no sewage sludge.

To collect the sludge you have to have sewage treatment plants and the vast majority of sewage in Greater Victoria is pumped raw into Juan de Fuca Strait or collects in septic tanks, to be periodically pumped into a smelly lagoon on the edge of town.

There are two small sewage treatment plants in the district, at Sidney and in Central Saanich, and one with an intriguing design is proposed for Ganges on Salt Spring Island. But even in the existing plants the sludge, after being rendered less polluted, is then pumped out to sea.

A little arithmetic shows that if dried sewage sludge ever comes to the district as compost, it won't exactly be free.

The sewage treatment plant at Sidney, being expanded to handle a population of about 10,000, represents a capital expense of about $1.5 million.

Apply that to the regional population of about 230,000 and the first thing you need to get into the sewage compost business on a district-wide basis is about $20 million for sewage plants. That's making no allowance for operating costs, including system to remove, dry and mix the sludge.

★

Much of the Capital district still requires a sewage collection system, something which will cost an unknown number of millions in the next two to three decades.

Capital compost won't come free.

If it does come, it won't pile up the way it's going to in Washington either. Right now dried sewage sludge would total about 12 tons a day.

It does seem likely some of the compost will be around before much longer. The Provincial Pollution Control Branch is probably going to require the Sidney plant to extract its sludge rather than pump it out to sea.

And if the experimental sewage treatment plant proposed for Ganges goes ahead, it would produce disinfected sludge which could be used as a soil conditioner.

'Rip-Off' Tax Shops Skip

They appear to have migrated to the Lower Mainland where there are at least nine companies still operating.

"I am pleased to see them leave this area because they take advantage of human misery. Their interest rates are outrageous."

Tindall said it was common practice for them to offer only 50 percent of the value of a tax rebate. And even then it was not all instant cash.

Typically a person who was entitled to a $1,000 refund in three months would be given $250 right away plus another $250 when the refund came to the shop from Ottawa three months later.

If the person had not been desperate for immediate cash, he would have had all $1,000, instead of $500.

In effect, the customer is being charged $500 to borrow $250 for three months. That is an interest rate of 200 per cent for three months or 800 per cent for one year.

"I hope no one from this area will deal with the (tax buying) shops on the Lower Mainland out of desperation. They should be able to find some credit union or finance company that will be able to help them at a reasonable interest rate, despite the fact that some of these people are poor credit risks."

Vancouver newspapers show advertisements for nine separate tax buying shops despite a crackdown by municipal councils there. Interest charges are limited by council action on shops in Vancouver, New Westminster, Burnaby and Port Coquitlam. However, the advertisements show companies operating in North Vancouver, Surrey and Langley where there are no restrictions.

'I'll Burn Your Store'

A young gunman who held up Burchell's Confectionery, 1137 Dominion, threatened to burn the store down if owner Marjory Burchell turned him in, city police said Tuesday.

After taking $42 from the till Monday, the youth stepped back and warned Mrs. Burchell:

"Where's the rest of it? If you recognize me to anyone, I'll burn your store down and there'll be no more store."

A 15-year-old boy was charged in juvenile court Tuesday with armed robbery, breaking and entering, theft, posession of stolen property and dangerous use of a firearm, stemming from the incident.

The boy, whose name cannot be published, was remanded in custody to Thursday for plea. Other charges may be pending, police said.

The boy was arrested after someone spotted him board a bus in front of the Pay-N-Save gas station minutes after the robbery. Police stopped the bus on the east side of the Johnson Street bridge and took him into custody.

Police said the youth had a loaded .22 calibre rifle in a burlap sack. The money taken in the robbery was recovered.

Mediator Asked After Collapse Of Civic Talks

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Negotiations between the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association and seven locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees have broken off and the employers have asked for a mediator.

The breakdown followed a 90-minute meeting Tuesday at which GVLRA negotiator Carl Anshelm told the union representatives they would have until this morning to respond to the employers' original offer.

If there was no response to the offer of six per cent in the first year of a two-year agreement and four per cent in the second, then Anshelm said he would request the services of a government mediator.

Daryl Anderson, spokesman for CUPE's joint negotiation committee, said today that after only four negotiating sessions, the unions had no intention of responding to the offer until they had more information on the cost of their own proposals.

He referred to the employers' decision to seek a mediator at this stage as very arbitrary and unilateral.

"However, we're not afraid of mediation," Anderson added. "It might mean we will get down to some honest negotiating."

Anshelm said a mediator is being sought "To speed up the process."

Initially he said he didn't want to comment because of an agreement with the unions that there would be no negotiating through the media.

However, he said, since the committee spokesman has chosen to make statements, he would be sending a letter to the committee today saying the GVLRA would no longer be bound by the no-comment agreement.

The committee, representing about 2,000 employees from the core municipalities, the Capital Region and the Greater Victoria school board; is seeking a one-year agreement to replace contracts which expired Dec. 31, 1976.

The committee says it's package amounts to an increase of between 10½ and 12 per cent. The GVLRA said the package was more like a 20-per-cent increase.

Anderson said Anshelm agreed at a meeting Feb. 3 to have the association's researchers work out the exact percentage figure based on the cost of a proposed dental plan and improved vacation clauses.

However, he said, that offer was withdrawn at Tuesday's meeting.

Abortions Continue To Climb

The number of babies born at Victoria's two general hospitals dropped again last year while the number of abortions performed continued to climb.

Abortions are now being performed at the rate of slightly more than two for every five live births.

There were 1,395 babies born at Royal Jubilee in 1975, dipping to 1,341 last year. Number of abortions climbed from 377 in 1975 to 401 last year.

At Victoria General, there were 1,213 babies born in 1975 and 1,032 last year. Rate of abortions went from 573 in 1975 to 631 last year.

One Man's Gull, Another's Gall

This was the advice given a Saanich resident Tuesday when he told the munnicipality's environment committee that his family's life had been made intolerable by day-long visitations by seagulls and crows.

H. A. Pohle of 1615 Mileva Lane told the aldermen his next door neighbor has been feeding the birds for 10 years and the birds now threaten his family's existence.

He said visits by pound officials and police had not helped.

Mayor Ed Lum suggested Pohle follow the example of some farmers who drive birds away by the use of a paper model hawk attached by a string to a ballon.

Chairman Ald. Sandy Noel suggested Pohle do what a neighbor of his did when plagued by the early morning crowing of a rooster.

★ ★ ★

"He phoned (the rooster's owner) at 3:30 a.m. every morning and crowed like a rooster".

He added, facetiously, "The best solution I can think of is to get somebody to run off with your neighbor's wife!"

In more serious vein, the committee agreed with Ald. John Mika that Pohle's best plan is to get a lawyer and have an injunction issued.

Pohle told aldermen: "They (the birds) depend on the handout. At 4 a.m. they're screaming on the roof and splattering the side of my house. Our daughter was born in June and we don't dare put her out on the sun deck for fear of seagulls setting down on her carriage."

He said after a recent fishing trip, one seagull swooped down and took the knife he was using to clean fish.

The aldermen said there is no bylaw that could help solve the problem but the mayor and others gave suggestions that might help if Pohle is reluctant to get legal help.

More Fans Than Flak on 'Mess'

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

William Valgardson's phone began to ring soon after readers across the country picked up Saturday's Weekend magazine containing his article entitled Free the Teacher.

The school system is a mess, he wrote in the magazine delivered with Saturday's Times and most of the blame can be laid on parents.

Valgardson, a teacher of creative writing at the University of Victoria, said he expected a lot of angry reaction, but instead "I was amazed that the calls were as positive as they were."

But Jan Mort, principal of Northridge Elementary, felt the article was negative and stressed the "irritating we-they concept of teachers pitted against parents."

She said that historical barrier is being broken down, especially in schools with an open-door policy that encourages parental co-operation and participation.

Valgardson said people called from as far as Manitoba and their tone was mainly: "Wow, are we ever glad to hear someone brave enough to be honest — to tell the other side of it."

He heard one story after another from teachers whose authority had been undermined by parents contradicting them, or failing to follow through with discipline — stories that were far worse than the examples he used in the Weekend article.

But Mrs. Mort said a lot of time and effort are needed to break down the old barriers. When it begins to work, a mutual respect and trust begins to grow.

MORT
. . . wants input

And there is no such thing as an irrational parent, she said, referring to Valgardson's statement that adults in their role as parents become irrational, always taking the side of their child against the teacher.

"I don't know an irrational parent," Mrs. Mort said.

In her four years as principal at Northridge, she has worked to make parents realize they are welcome in the school.

Now an average of 10 to 15 parents a day are involved in classroom activities — different ones every day, she adds.

She agrees with Valgardson's suggestion that classes should be structured — that is, if structure is defined as giving direction, purpose and evaluation in an active, challenging and relaxed atmosphere.

"My classes are relaxed, but they are structured," she said.

Valgardson's article concludes with a suggestion that if parents aren't happy with their child's education, to call the school and "tell the principal how you feel."

"This isn't good enough," Mrs. Mort said. "It must be more than a complaint. Parents have to be responsive and willing to give input."

She said she hadn't received any calls from parents who had read Valgardson's article.

She said she probably would have known already if Northridge parents were dissatisfied.

CITY MOVES OUT OF ITS OWN END

Not quite as fast as a Bobby Hull slapshot, Victoria aldermen are spearheading the attack on violence in the Western Canada Hockey League.

The subject has been virtually a permanent item on committee and council agendas over the past several months, with seemingly endless discussion and bold threats but not too much action.

On Tuesday, however, council in caucus swiftly approved a draft contract clause which, it hopes, will be adopted by the 11 other cities which have teams in the league.

The hope is that the contract language will be in place throughout the WCHL in time for the 1977-78 season, to ensure a uniform policy of combatting violence.

Under the provisions, the Victoria Cougars as licensees would be required to take "all precautions reasonably necessary to prevent violence at and during hockey games in the Memorial Arena."

Failure to comply could result in council terminating the contract at 60 days' notice.

If within the 60-day period council is satisfied that the club has not been able to relocate in another city, and there has been no repetition of violence, the notice of termination could be revoked or extended.

Mayne Island Sea Lions Bonus for Ferry Riders

A herd of sea lions on Mayne Island at the western entrance to Active Pass has become a major attraction for passengers on Victoria-Vancouver ferries.

"They are certainly increasing by leaps and bounds since the species was granted protection a few years ago," said Charles Guiguet, curator of mammals at the Provincial Museum. "There were half as many five years ago."

He said Helen Point has become a winter rookery for the sea lions.

"It's the herring that attracts them," he said.

There are two species at Helen Point—northern sea lions and California sea lions. The former breed during the summer months on rookeries in northern B.C. waters and Alaska, the latter off the coast of California.

It Was All Anderson In Win Over Chiefs

Gregg Anderson of Victoria Cougars got a free gift of a goal at Memorial Arena Tuesday night and then proceeded to prove he could do even better on his own.

Getting credit for a goal that was tipped into the net by a Kamloops defender midway through the second period with the score tied at 1-1, Anderson then scored two fine goals to lead the Cougars to a 4-2 victory over the Chiefs before 2,136 fans.

In all he had three goals and one assist.

Victory moved the Cougars back into second place in the Western Division of the Western Canada Hockey League, one point ahead of the Chiefs, who had dropped them into third place Sunday at Kamloops with a 7-4 win.

Trailing the division-leading New Westminster Bruins by 16 points, Cougars have two games in hand over the Chiefs.

It was a tight battle until Anderson took charge. The Chiefs had forged into a 1-0 lead in the first period on a goal by Len Dies.

Anderson then drew an assist on Geordie Robertson's 26th goal of the season early in the second period and about seven minutes later got his first counter on that errant move by the Kamloops defender.

With less than two minutes remaining in the second period and the Cougars serving a penalty, Anderson broke out of his own zone, took a pass from Leroy Heck near centre ice, beat one man and flipped a high shot into the net past Kamloops goalkeeper Gary Nakrayko.

That gave the Cougars breathing room. Then early in the final period, Anderson fired a hard shot from inside the blue line, catching the top corner of the net to put the Cougars ahead 4-1.

Just to make it his night all round, Anderson was serving a penalty when the Chiefs, through Ryan Walters, scored a power-play goal at 14:54 of the final period to close out the scoring.

The three goals were Anderson's 34th, 35th and 36th of the season.

In other games, the Bruins played to a 4-4 tie at Saskatoon and at Brandon, Bill Derlago, the league scoring leader, pumped in four goals as the Wheat Kings bombed the visiting Winnipeg Monarchs 9-3.

Derlago now has 68 goals, 22 short of the record 90 held by former Wheat King Ron Chipperfield. Brandon has 18 games to play.

Murray Thomson, Gord Kaluzniak, Wayne Ramsey, Dave Semenko and Randy Markewich also scored for the Wheat Kings. Guy Lash, Tom Cullen and Jim Malazdrewics scored for Winnipeg.

'Kids' Add Life To Blues, Larose

By The Canadian Press

Claude Larose attributed his three-goal performance Tuesday night to an attempt to keep up with the younger generation.

"I think the kids have something to do with it," said the 34-year-old right winger after leading St. Louis Blues to a 6-3 win over Pittsburgh Penguins in National Hockey League action.

"They come on the ice and skate with enthusiasm. It sort of rubs off on you, I guess. You see what they're doing and you want to be a part"

The kids Larose referred to were rookies Bernie Federko, Rick Bourbonnais and Brian Sutter who fired 11 of the Blues' 51 shots.

"I think the kids have generated something," Blues coach Emile Francis said of the youngsters he promoted last week from Kansas City of the Central Hockey League.

In the World Hockey Association, Winnipeg Jets beat Quebec Nordiques 7-2, San Diego Mariners defeated Edmonton Oilers 6-4 and Indianapolis Racers tied Houston Aeros 4-4.

"I think the last time I got three was against this club with Montreal," recalled Larose, who is in his 16th NHL season and with his third NHL club.

Larry Patey was credited with an assist on each goal by Larose, who fired nine shots.

Brian Trottier scored a power-play goal in the first period and assisted on goals by Billy Harris and Clark Gillies in the Islanders' victory over Los Angeles. Marcel Dionne scored his 31st goal of the season for the Kings who suffered their 24th loss in 54 games.

In the WHA at Quebec, Ulf Nilsson scored three goals to lead Winnipeg to a 6-0 lead before the Nordiques managed to get two goals in the last 10 minutes.

The three goals gave Nilsson 27 for the season for a total of 84 points, third best in the league behind team-mate Anders Hedberg and Quebec's Real Cloutier.

At Edmonton, Norm Ferguson's two goals led San Diego to a 5-2 lead after two periods and the Mariners held off a late Oilers rally.

Don Burgess scored at 13:26 of the third period to give San Diego a 6-2 lead before Edmonton came back with two goals by Wayne Connelly and Bill Flett's second of the night.

The Oilers outshot San Diego 17-7 in the third-period rally.

Blair MacDonald's second goal of the night with 42 seconds remaining at Indianapolis gave the Racers the 4-4 tie against Houston.

Surprise for the Refs

MONTREAL (CP) — Several National Hockey League referees and linesmen have been warned to shape up, otherwise they could find themselves shipped out before next season.

Scotty Morrison, the league's referee - in - chief, has sent letters to several officials following surprise fitness tests several weeks ago. Referees and linesmen were ordered to fly into Toronto for the tests on a couple of days notice, a tactic that left several of the officials disgruntled.

"If anybody is unhappy, that's just too bad," said Morrison in an interview. "All of the officials know they must be in a state of maximum fitness for the entire season. The reason we called for these tests on short notice is that we wanted to make certain they were.

"It's not enough for officials to work hard before the season opens, come into camp, go through their tests and then feel their work is over for another year. These tests were something I felt were necessary and although the over-all were very good — others were horrendous. That's the word — horrendous."

One referee was sent to the minor leagues for a number of games to get in shape and other officials were told that they better shape up or risk losing their jobs.

All of the officials were tested with eight factors in kind. They included oxygen uptake, heart reserve, lungs, percentage of body fat, power, strength index, flexibility and agility.

"On the other hand," said Morrison, "you've got a linesman like Leon Stickle, whose ideal weight is 217. When we put him through the tests, he was down to 215. That indicates he's been working at it."

Morrison said he was aware that some officials were unhappy about being ordered into Toronto on a day or two notice.

"If they're unhappy about it, they've got only themselves to blame. I don't feel I had to give them more than a day's notice. They've got their assignments for the next three weeks, so why can't they come in and have their tests on short notice? What I'm saying is that if guys are out of shape halfway through the season, something is drastically wrong.

"They're aware of what their contract reads, just as I am. The contract stipulates that they must be in good physical condition and maintain that condition.

"I made it very clear that they could lose their jobs if they don't get to work on their fitness. I except them to work at it.

"We're not going to forget about them, either. I've told them they'll be re-tested in the future and it could come at any time. There won't be any advance warning, because right now I don't even know myself when they will be held. When they are re-tested, though, there had better be a drastic change.

Tigers Pad Win Streak By Shattering Another

Victoria Tigers eliminated the gravest potential threat to an enviable unbeaten record Tuesday by defeating host Reynolds Roadrunners 44-37 in a Greater Victoria High School Girls' Basketball League game.

Tigers are now 39-0 after nearly three seasons of play and can cap another unbeaten schedule by posting a win over host Belmont Tomahawks on Thursday.

Roadrunners were previously unbeaten in 10 games this season.

In other games, Esquimalt Dockers tripped Tomahawks 44-35 and Spectrum downed Oak Bay, 47-41.

Roadrunners stayed close to Tigers the entire game and were trailing by only 34-30 at half time.

Sandy Lewis fiped 18 points to lead the Tigers while Teri Paone added 10 and Leslie Metcalfe chipped in eight. Rhonda Kellar led Reynolds with 15 points.

Esquimalt was paced by 13-point efforts from Robyn Bartlett and Jody Duncan while Shirley Dyson dunked 13 points to lead the Spectrum offence.

Blue Bombers Increase Profit

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference have announced a net operating profit for 1976 of $66,130.

Ross Smith, vice-president for finance, told the club's annual meeting the figure exceeded the profit that had been anticipated and was far in excess of the $9,451 profit of 1975.

However, Smith said in his report the increased profit was mainly the result of factors not relating directly to local football operations and said there will be a price increase for tickets next season.

He said the bombers received $18,651 from the league's gate equalization pool compared with just $4,500 last year. Gross revenue from home games increased $181,072 to $1,606,788 despite a decline in attendance. And that decline came despite record season-ticket sales of more than 15,000.

The biggest boost was in other income that increased by $85,788 to $325,313. That included major increases from the Grey Cup and other league revenues.

Despite the increased profit, both Smith and club president Earle Hiebert, emphasized again that an increase in seating capacity in Winnipeg Stadium is essential for the future of the Bombers.

Talks Fruitless

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of the National Football League owners and players union met in private for four hours Tuesday in hopes of resolving their long-standing labor problems. No progress was reported.

The two sides will meet again today in the latest of their stepped-up negotiations to come to a new collective bargaining agreement to replace the contract that expired Jan. 31, 1974.

After the meeting a union spokesman said the only message is "no progress.'.

Terry Bledsoe, a management representative, said: "I wouldn't want to characterize it one way or another, not at this stage."

The meeting was the fourth since the Super Bowl and both sides had expressed optimism that an agreement might be reached in the near future, especially since there is pressure because a federal judge ruled the college draft illegal.

TOUGH SKI TRACK TAKES HIGH TOLL

BAD KLEINKIRCHHEIM (AP) — AnneMarie Moser-Proell won the downhill race Wednesday in the Austrian national skiing championships, regarded as one of the toughest races ever for women.

The track—the shortened course normally provided for male skiers—was so difficult that of 68 competitors only 42 took part, and of these only 25 finished the race.

Some fell or missed directional gates on the track measuring 2,300 metres with a vertical drop of 670 metres and 23 gates.

Moser-Proell was clocked in 1:33.61. Second was Brigitte Habersatter in 1:34.98 and third was Nicola Spiess in 1:36.81.

Veteran skier Monika Kaserer, who finished seventh, spoke for many competitors when she said, "I really don't want to compete in such a downhill any more."

RACING'S FIGURES TERMED MISLEADING

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charles Cella, president of the Thoroughbred Racing Associations, said Tuesday that record figures in attendance and handle do not reflect racing's true health.

"The reason for suspect towards the veneer of success is now known by all of us who are in this business," Cella said in remarks prepared for the opening of the TRA's 35th annual convention.

"The gross annual handle and attendance figures rise year after year, implying good health, but our daily averages in both of these categories normally continue to shrink.

"The records we break yearly are brought on by increasing our racing days which normally dilute our daily average figures. As businessmen, we have let the obsession of sales stand to the detriment of meaningful development.

Sooke Conservation Group Opposed to McGregor Dam

Members of the Sooke Conservation Society appear to agree with this writer's thinking that pressure must be exerted on the provincial government to scrap B.C. Hydro's plans to construct a dam on the McGregor River.

The planned dam would divert water from the McGregor into the Parsnip River to eventually feed W.A.C. Bennett dam.

Objections to the dam were outlined in a recent letter the Sooke organization sent to Premier Bill Bennett.

"We are a club especially active in the conservation of salmon," the letter said. "We have installed and maintained fish boxes in local rivers for several years running and we have done a great deal of work in clearing and installing a small dam and holding water in a smll creek (DeMmiel) which runs dry every autumn."

"Now, suddenly, it seems that at a time when clubs and groups such as ours are putting so much into preserving our salmon resources; when the federal government is pouring millions of dollars into salmon enhancement; you, the provincial government, are developing a plan which will make inaccessible to salmon 75 miles of chinook spawning waters, virtually eliminating the large and healthy runs of salmon up the McGregor River."

They pointed out one grave danger of linking the two river systems. Although the possibility is remote, every expert to come forward has stated there is a chance northern pike might be introduced into the Fraser River system through the Parsnip.

Northern pike carry a tapeworm parasite that is deadly to salmon. In addition to a direct loss of $40 million annually if the Fraser River salmon were wiped out, you have to consider the social costs of unemployment such a catastrophe would produce.

Other problems arising from the dam construction were cited:

—The Parsnip basin will be flooded by six times the normal flow of water, producing unstable and dangerous river banks for years to come.

—Within the McGregor Basin, 95 per cent of the critical wildlife habitat will be eliminated, along with 75 per cent of the beaver population, 95 per cent of the muskrat population and 100 per cent of the moose population.

—There will be a 20 per cent loss in Northwood Lumber Co.'s timber production.

—The flow of the Fraser will be decreased by 25 per cent (some estimates go as high as 33 per cent) at Prince George, where pulp mills depend on a heavy flow of water to carry away and disperse effluents.

—Pipelines and bridges would have to be relocated at considerable expense.

—In addition to the $9 million required to clear the reservoir, undetermined millions will be needed for actual construction of the dam and any river diversion work that may be necessary. Balance that against the fact that the dam will only be good for about 60 years.

"Our members question that the advantages outweigh the disadvantages and the costs to the public," states the Sooke group.

"At a time when people are becoming aware of and concerned about the necessity of having to protect our salmon runs, our wildlife, our agricultural lands, it is outrageous that our provincial government could step in with a plan which will so severely damage the West Coast fishing industry, will destroy a valuable river valley and the wintering grounds for hundreds of animals, will contribute to the pollution problems of the Fraser River and possibly damage whatever fish that remain . . ."

"We hope that you reconsider your plan, and instead of producing more power to satisfy people who are too used to wasting it, encourage them to conserve.

"Look for safe and reasonable alternatives.

"We believe in the long run, you will find that conservation and preservation of our natural resources and wildlife will be far cheaper than hurried exploitation, for just a little extra energy."

The Sooke Conservation Society is to be commended for it's stand on an issue which, to some, may seem far away. But the ramifications of this dam would touch us all in one way or another.

Now is the time to stand up and be counted!

WENDY IS SELECTED TO CANADIAN TEAM

The Canadian squad, announced Tuesday, includes Steve Toguel, 20, Toronto; Josef Brabenec Jr., 20, Vancouver; Wendy Barlow, 17, Victoria, and Pat Sinclair, 19, Toronto.

It marks the first time Canada has lined up against Britain, United States, Italy, France, West Germany, Spain and Holland in the tourney.

It was also announced that the Swedish team has been withdrawn due to lack of funds. Sweden's hurried departure opened the door for Canada's entry to the prestige tournament.

Braves in Rout Over Red Wings

Players for Saanich Braves, who have clinched the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" League title, concentrated on padding their individual point totals Tuesday night while crushing Victoria Ray's Red Wings 13-3 at Pearkes Arena.

Wayne Larsen and Bill Adkin led the score fast with three goals each. Brent Patterson scored twice and singles were fired by Ed Beauchemin, Rob Colwell, Tom King, Scott Connors and Ron Jobson.

Monty Drummond (2) and Wayne Mahar replied for Wings, who trailed 8-1 after the first period and 13-2 after the second.

Wayne Proceviat of Victoria, needs one more goal to set a league goals-per-season record, sat out the game with an injured elbow but is expected to play in the final Saanich game Thursday against Lake Cowichan Bairds Trucking at Memorial Arena.

MVP Signs For Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS (CP) — Wolfgang Suhnsolz, most valuable player in the North American Soccer League chanpionship game last year, has been signed to a multi-year contract by Las Vegas Quicksilvers.

Suhnsolz, a 30-year-old midfielder, was acquired by the Quicksilvers from the NASL champion Toronto Metros-Croatia for future considerations.

Bays Play to Ranking

Oak Bay Bays are still No. 1 in the Greater Victoria High School Boys Basketball League and if Tuesday night's display against Spectrum is any criterion it doesn't appear they are about to lose their No. 1 provincial rating either.

The Bays lived up to their high ranking by drubbing Spectrum, the league's "A" division leader, 97-65, before about 700 fans at Spectrum. It was the ninth straight victory in league play for the Bays this season.

Ken Kirzinger paced the Bays with 22 points while Craig Higgins added 18 and Kelly Dukeshire had 17. Dan Ryan and Harbinder Sanghara sparked Spectrum with 18 and 15 points, respectively.

In other games, Victoria High moved into a tie with Spectrum for the "A" division lead with a 75-44 victory over Reynolds, Belmont edged Esquimalt 68-63, Dunsmuir tripped Parkland 64-54 and Claremont easily handled Mount Doug, 71-50.

Claremont trails Spectrum and Vic High by two points but has a game in hand. Oak Bay is all alone in front in "B" division with Esquimalt second 10 points behind.

Claremont's Rick Robertson was suspended for two games for arguing with an official.

Cowichan Thunderbirds scored a major upset in the up-island league and did it in style.

The Thunderbirds trimmed Nanaimo Islanders, ranked fourth in the province, 101-66. Jay Fiddick scored 25 points, Ed Olthof had 22 and Ken Larson scored 20. It was the Islanders first defeat in league play this season.

Happy birthday to me! It was one year ago we started this column. From the many comments we've heard I know many of you found it useful.

How is your tie situation? This year some interesting new things are appearing in neckwear. Square end ties are going to be seen this spring. The square end tie is definitely the rage in fashionable European circles and we know of two Canadian manufacturers who will be introducing it within the next few months.

Another interesting facet to the tie industry is the recognition that younger men are turning to a dressier look. As a result the spring season will be shaped by a subtle return to conservative fashion.

There will be a greater interest in medium colour tones rather than the lighter shades of past years. Look also for geometric stripes and special panel effects.

More well dressed men will be featuring pocket puffs co-ordinated to their neckwear. Puffs will be either matching or contrasting to give a very dressy touch.

We are professionals!

Leafs trailed 2-1 after the first period but had knotted the count 2-2 going into the final frame.

The series continues Monday night at Memorial Arena. Victoria Athletics, who hold a 2-0 lead, and Chemainus Blues meet in the third game of the other series at 8:30 p.m. Thursday at Pearkes Arena.

Trotters Back in Town Friday

In France they are called the Magiciens du Ballon, in Spain they are known as Los Basquetbol Brujos, Germany calls them Die Zauberers von Korball, but on Vancouver Island they are remembered as the Harlem Globetrotters.

This is the 51st year of the Globetrotters, who will perform their basketball magic and their comedy routines at Memorial Arena Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Most basketball fans know of the talents of the Trotters, who were among the earliest touring professional teams. In former years on visits to Victoria, the tourists played against the Canadian-champion Dominoes. This was tough basketball and, with the Trotters determined to avoid defeat, there was often little time for comedy and showmanship.

Now the court comedians travel with another pro squad and combine their playing skills with a vaudeville presentation. It's a system that has continued to intrigue fans around the globe.

During the 50 years of their existence, the Trotters have won 12,406 games, losing 323 for a .974 percentage and in competition against the College All-Stars in years past the Trotters ran up an impressive total of 146 wins to 66 defeats.

Some of the stars who may be with them here are the famed Meadowlark Lemon, veteran dribbling star, Marques Haynes, Geese Ausbie and Twiggy Saunders.

There are three companies of the Trotters now touring 90 cities in the United States and Canada — that's how much the team and the organization has grown since those early days when a seven-man team and sometimes a manager, who doubled as driver would show up.

Now the team is chosen from a pre-season training camp attended by more than 30 veterans and rookies and each unit lives up to Trotter standards.

All seats are reserved at Memorial Arena and cost $4, $4.50 and $5. There will be special children's prices (12 years and under) of $1 off regular prices.

Dolphins Adopt a 'New Look'

The fact that they haven't won a game in three seasons apparently hasn't thrown Victoria Dolphins for a loss.

Determined to do better and hoping a "new look" will help, the Dolphins are preparing for another B.C. Big Four Junior Football League season. Directed by an executive headed by Sam Taylor, they'll call their first training drill in late March.

Hindle's assistants will be Dan Gatto, Lonny Mitchell and Dan Crossman.

Dolphins will have 26 players eligible to return from those who played with the club last season and it is hoped that several members of the Cowichan Timbermen, provincial juvenile champions in 1976, will turn out for practice.

"We've heard that 15 to 17 of the Cowichan players are interested in joining us," said Campbell.

He also explained that an effort would be made this year to adopt a new approach, expanding activities of the club instead of sticking strictly to football business.

"We think a togetherness developed by a social program will add something to the team," he added.

Dolphins, who have scheduled their annual $100-a-plate dinner for March 25, will have a budget this year of about $12,000 and directors are hoping to see a return to the average of 600 or 700 fans that attended Victoria games in former years but dwindled last season.

Among Dolphin problems is the travel subsidy that must be paid to teams visiting Victoria. "That is $250," said Campbell, "and we don't get anything to travel to the mainland."

"They wanted $400," he added.

It is planned to hold a training session similar to the one held last year with coaches of B.C. Lions in attendance.

As part of their new look, the Dolphins will sponsor teams in the junior bantam and bantam divisions this season.

"We are a football club," said Campbell, "and this year we hope to prove it."

MARINER LIST GROWS

SEATTLE (AP) — Four new players signed Tuesday with Seattle Mariners, the city's American League expansion baseball team, bringing to 23 the number of players under contract for the 1977 season.

Dick Vertlieb, executive-director and general manager, said the latest to sign were outfielder Steve Braun, pitchers Jim Minshall and Roy Thomas and catcher Skip Jutze. Braun signed a multi-year contract while the others signed one-year contracts.

Braun, acquired from Minnesota in the expansion draft, hit .288 for the Twins in 1976. Minshall pitched for Charleston, W. Va. in the International League in 1976, compiling a 6-3 record, while Thomas pitched 6-11 for Iowa of the American Association.

Curling Playoff Goes to Extra End

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Heather Kerr of Richmond defeated Lindsay Sparkes of North Vancouver, 6-5, in an extra end Tuesday to win a playoff for the British Columbia women's curling title.

It was Kerr's third win in four starts against the defending Canadian women's champion this season, and the Kerr foursome advances to the national championship at Halifax Feb. 27-March 4.

In semi-final play, Kerr dumped Carol Busat of Peace River, 11-4, while Sparkes ran Beth Smith of Delta out of rocks in the 10th end for a 6-3 win.

Sparkes had a chance for victory in the 10th end when she had last rock and needed to hit a takeout and stay for the two points that would erase a 5-4 deficit.

However, Sparkes' takeout was narrow and heavy. It rolled out, giving her the point to tie but surrendering last rock in the extra end.

Carter Seeking Arms Race Curb

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Carter said Tuesday the United States has nuclear superiority over the Soviet Union, but urged initiatives to restrain the nuclear arms race, including a halt in deployment of hard-to-detect Soviet mobile SS-20 missiles.

The SS-20s carry multiple warheads and are aimed primarily at Western Europe but might be converted into an intercontinental weapon by bolting a new stage on it.

Carter, in his first major news conference as president, said it is "very, very important" that both sides take fresh initiatives to prevent nuclear war which could take the lives of up to 100 million Americans and Russians.

But in proposing fresh disarmament initiatives, Carter again expressed concern about treatment of dissident Soviet citizens and insisted that his criticism of Moscow on human rights issues should have no material bearing on the search for arms curbs.

In fact he has already approached the Russians, asking for agreement on a system of "prior notice" — 24 to 48 hours — before testing intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Negotiations for a new nuclear weapons treaty have been in limbo for more than a year. Principal problems have been the U.S. jet-powered Cruise missile and the Russian Tupolev bomber, known to the West as the Backfire, with each side insisting the other's weapon be included in a 2,400 weapons limit.

Carter said that he is willing to reach a "quick agreement" that would omit the Cruise and Backfire at this stage, leaving them for negotiations on a subsequent weapons accord. State Secretary Cyrus Vance will go to Moscow toward the end of March to take up the subject with the Russians.

In reaffirming his goal of reducing nuclear weapons, Carter rejected suggestions that the U.S. has fallen behind in the arms race.

"We have superior nuclear capacity," he said, arguing that the greater number and accuracy of U.S. weapons more than offsets the Soviet advantage in missile size and warhead power.

U.S. ENVOY BOOED

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Thomas Enders, United States ambassador to Canada, was met by protesters chanting "Yankee go Home" when he visited Queen's University on Tuesday.

About 15 students and faculty members faced Enders with protest posters as he entered a hall to speak on Canadian-American relations.

During a question period which followed, one student asked why the U.S. government had chosen "a person with your nefarious background" to be ambassador to Canada.

The student suggested there were covert U.S. intelligence operations in progress in Quebec.

Enders said the U.S. does not conduct intelligence activities in Canada and that there is no U.S. plan for the attack on Quebec.

CREW TEST TO REDUCE SPILLS?

QUEBEC (CP) — An American shipping official suggested Tuesday that crew licensing standards should be toughened to combat human error in oil spill accidents.

Vice-Admiral Paul Trimble, president of the Lake Carriers Association, said at a marine conference here that governments might be wise to stress improved licensing requirements rather than anti-pollution equipment in fighting oil spills.

His comments came after Rear Admiral James Gracey, a top U.S. Coast Guard official, said that human error was behind an oil spill at Alexandria Bay, N.Y., last summer. The U.S.S barge Nepco 140 spilled 250,000 gallons, costing $10.2 million to clean up.

Canadian marine officials said later that Canadian licensing standards already are high. Ottawa plans further changes in its master's certificate requirements, they said.

William O'Neill, commandant of the Canadian Coast Guard, also said there is "always a thorny question as to whether to re-examine mariners."

"This isn't done by anyone. It is a question before us."

Penalties for breaking anti-pollution laws in Canadian waters are stiff, but enforcement is the problem as Canadian officials cannot possibly board every vessel to see whether the law is being observed, Mr. O'Neill said.

Admiral Gracey said there was ample opportunity for the Nepco disaster to be prevented.

Steelmen Vote For Leader

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Rebel Ed Sadlowski stubbornly insisted he still had a good chance of capturing the United Steelworkers presidency today, despite his own charges of ballot fraud and early returns favoring opponent Lloyd McBride.

Several hundred thousand steelworkers cast secret ballots in the election Tuesday, ending one of the roughest election battles in labor history. Some union officials said the total may even prove to be a record turnout.

McBride, 60, a colorless candidate with awesome support from retiring president I. W. Abel and virtually every other American labor leader, was leading by more than 2-to-1 in an independent vote tally by UPI from union offices throughout the United States and Canada.

The vote was close in most of the northeastern industrial centres. Sadlowski was ahead in Michigan and Maryland, but McBride dominated Canada and the south.

But the two candidates disagreed over the figures. McBride's own totals were similar to those from union offices. Sadlowski adhered instead, to a small tally that showed him slightly ahead.

Already laying the groundwork for an election challenge, Sadlowski cited an unconfirmed report of ballot box stuffing in a local in Birmingham, Ala. He said one local official was seen with ballots in his pocket.

900-Pupil School Heated by Caveman Techniques

By BART BARNES
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — If all goes according to schedule, more than 900 children will begin classes soon in the country's first 100 per cent solar-heated and cooled school, located inside a hill in the new town of Reston, Va.

"This technology really started with the cavemen. We got away from it when energy was so cheap. Now we're going back," said Fairfax County's school construction director, Alton C. Hlavin, standing at the crest of the hill, directly above a classroom buried in the earth beneath him.

In its most fundamental terms, Hlavin explained, the project simply represents a return to using the natural heat-insulating properties of the soil and the warming power of the sun to conserve energy.

To do that, school builders essentially bulldozed off the top of the hill, poured a concrete shell for the school, then put the hill back again, as if it were a hat on the school's roof.

Then, with a $665,000 grant from a university in Saudi Arabia, they designed an elaborate system for heating and cooling the school with solar energy, using a computer and 4,860 glass solar collectors to capture the sun's heat.

The project had its origins during the winter of 1973-74, with the energy crisis and the Arab oil embargo. Hlavin and his staff were seeking ways to save energy and eventually they hit upon the idea of putting a school underground and using the sun to heat and cool it.

"At first we named it the 'underground school,'" Hlavin said, "but that sounds kind of gloomy. Over drinks at lunch one day, we came up with the name 'Terraset,' meaning set in the earth."

Initially, Hlavin applied to the National Science Foundation for a grant to heat the school with solar energy, but he was turned down. A few weeks later an agent who turned out to be a Saudi representative approached him and asked if he'd be interested in money from a private source.

Hlavin said yes, and the deal was later sealed between the Fairfax County's schools and Saudi Arabia's University of Petroleum and Minerals.

Under the agreement, the Saudis are entitled to the benefit of any technological discoveries and have the right to visit the school. Their interest in the project, Hlavin explained, stems from the fact that their oil resources, vast as they are, are limited and will eventually run out. Sunlight, which they also have in abundance, will not.

Opening of the school awaits installation of a sidewalk, delayed by the cold weather.

Over a sunken courtyard at the front entrance to the building stood a 13,000-square-foot iron rack where the solar collectors will be installed.

The solar system will operate via 4,822 feet of tubing through which thousands of gallons of water being warmed directly by the sun's rays and indirectly by reflectors will be pumped.

Computers will regulate the temperature between 180 and 240 degrees — the system is pressurized, enabling the water to reach temperatures hotter than the 212-degree Fahrenheit boiling point.

Passing from the solar collectors, the water flows into two 2,500-gallon storage tanks and from there — if it is being used for heating purposes — to heat the water in the school's hot-water heating system.

If it is being used to cool the building, the hot water — at 2340 degrees — is cooled through a process of compression, condensation and absorption that brings it down to a temperature of 42 degrees. It is then circulated through coils, and fans blow the air past the coils, thereby cooling the building.

As a safeguard against sunless days, there are three 10,000-gallon insulated storage tanks that can hold water without the temperature changing more than 1 degree a day, plus a backup electric boiler system that Hlavin estimates will be used no more than two days a year.

In a normal Fairfax County school the size of Terraset, heating costs run about $40,000 a year, Hlavin said.

At Terraset, the costs will be about $10,000, and most of that will be to run pumps and fans, he said.

The building itself is completely earth covered on top and on one side, leaving three sides with windows from which children can look out on the hillside.

Inside there are offices, a library, gymnasium, cafeteria and four circular "pods," each of which can be divided up into eight pie-shaped classrooms. The earth covering on top ranges from 2 to 8 feet thick and eventually will be landscaped and used as a play area.

Since Fairfax County first announced plans to build terraset — at a cost of $2.7 million — more than two years ago, officials have had about 400 requests for information about the school, ranging from the Israeli Department of Agriculture to education officials in Sweden and Denmark.

Closer to home, there are some skeptics.

Around the state of Virginia, when Hlavin attends meetings of fellow school construction officials, there is a stock question.

"Have you gone crazy up there in Fairfax? Are you going to bury all your schools?"

Flu Shot Ban Lifted In U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Tuesday recommended that the flu shot program be resumed for 20 million older and chronically ill Americans.

He said state and local health officers and private doctors should give them a combined vaccine that protects against A-Victoria Flu and Swine Flu. The secretary explained that the combined vaccine is the only existing one that can offer protection against the A-Victoria Flu that has afflicted 59 residents of a Miami nursing home. No single-purpose A-Victoria vaccine has been manufactured this year.

The combined vaccine may be given, at doctors' discretion, to anyone else with special needs, such as hospital and nursing home workers, Califano said.

French Sparkle Dimmed by Export

Movie Review By Nora Hutchison

Last spring, the walls of the Metro in Paris were covered with posters advertising the movie Lumiere — French actress Jeanne Moreau's debut as a screen writer and director. I admired her choice of title — a sparkling pun that recalled Louis Lumiere, France's first filmmaker who made moving pictures of actual events, the glitter of the movie business, anr the important call on the set "lights, camera, action!" — but I was too entranced with Paris to insulate myself in a cinema. I wish now that I'd seen it there. At home, on North American soil, I am not so in tune with its atmosphere, not so sympathique, less ready to forget its indulgences.

Jeanne Moreau's movie, in which she also plays the lead, Sarah Dedieu, a famous screen actress, is an extravagant, day-dreamy vision of the life and times of a star. Sarah is a sort of elegant earth-mother who spares no concern or love for any of her friends. Her life is a series of dramatic highs compounded of passion and laughter, and color-cued to her favorite shades of red. Sarah appears to fear nothing — age, the competition of younger actresses, or the possible diminishing of her lovers' attentions. It seems she is completely in control of her life.

The movie's prelude, a sequence in which Sarah entertains some of her favorite women friends, sets the tune for what is to come. The women splash prettily in Sarah's pool; they wander through a candle-lit garden, arm in arm. One of the younger women runs down a country lane dragging a red kite. The four lunch together in the sun, dressed in embroidered cotton gowns, picking at an apple tart ringed with sugared violets. Then Sarah and her entourage are back in Paris, and a week in Sarah's life unfolds.

She completes the filming on one project, and begins pre-production on another. She discards one lover — a baby-faced film director — gently but firmly so that she can begin a relationship with a stone-faced writer. She spends time with an old friend, Gregoire (Francois Simon), an ascetic scientist who is so devoted to her that he is like a husband in everything but sex. In his laboratory, she watches amoebae dividing in a culture dish. In a shooting gallery, he watches as she learns to fire a pistol for her new role. They eat a salad of nasturtium leaves and talk quietly about life and art.

At the end of the week, Sarah is given a special award and all her friends gather around to celebrate her good fortune. She awakens the next morning to the news that Gregoire, who was dying of leukemia, has committed suicide. Sarah's face is impassive. Her grief, apparently, can find no expression. She puts on a black tuxedo and a tomato-red cape, and goes off to the studio for color tests. The set is lit, she is positioned, and then as the camera rolls toward her, she breaks down. The camera pulls back, the lights are dimmed, and Sarah turns her back on us, a study in anguish.

Jeanne Moreau is one of the most exciting contempory actresses — vivid and extraordinarily expressive — and when she is thoroughly engaged in a role, her appearance varies according to her moods. At her best, Moreau can easily persuade us that she alone is worth our attention. Moreau bares her soul to the camera, and to the director — it's as if she's making love to him through the lens. In the 1960's, she was quoted as saying that she preferred her director to tell her what to do with herself and her character before the camera because the ideas you can have about yourself are not very interesting . . . it is much better to see yourself through somebody else's eyes."

MOREAU

Moreau was right. An actor who directs himself or imposes his ideas upon his director, more often than not, creates a character whose moods and moves are too considered, too self-conscious. Directing herself, Moreau sees herself through herself — there's nobody else there to hold her in check, to point out what works and what doesn't. Moreau goes soft on her screenplay, and on herself.

The young women in the cast — Francine Racette, a delightful French-Canadian actress, and Caroline Cartier, are directed with style and perception but the scenes that she has written for herself are excessively romantic. When she leans against the shoulder of her lover, the silent writer, it's as though she'd taken all her cues from women's pictures of some 30 years ago. That move may have worked for Bette Davis but it's too manipulated to suit this actress's energies.

Moreau's movie suggests that she sees herself as a loving, supportive, Colette-like lady whose overwhelming interest in and concern for her friends permeates her entire life, and fills her with such creative energies that she can live one life to the hilt and continue to act out others. It must be a very satisfying image to have of one's self.

In spite of its excesses, though, the movie is fun because Moreau is Moreau, and at times she is very fine, because her screenplay is a lovely, indulgent idea of what a star's life ought to be like. It's just too bad that on her first solo, Moreau has hit so many false notes.

EGYPTIAN POLITICS BARED IN MOVIE

By THOMAS LIPPMAN
Washington Post

CAIRO — The voluptuous madam of a high-class Cairo brothel is murdered in her bedroom after a party attended by her best customers.

All the male guests — ostensibly respectable government officials and professional men — have solid alibis. But, to prove his innocence of the slaying, each one has to admit to the police what he was really doing at the time, and each one, it turns out, was committing some other crime. All end up behind bars, jailed with common criminals.

This devastating portrayal of Egypt as a corrupt and decadent society is the plot of an Egyptian-made movie that's drawing enthusiastic crowds in Cairo theatres and has stirred an uproar in other Arab countries where it has been shown.

An inquiry is under way in the People's Assembly and the film, titled "The Guilty Ones," has been withdrawn from export distribution.

It would be embarrassing for the government to suppress the film here because it was made with official co-operation and passed by the censor. Furthermore, it won a "Nefertiti" award as the best Egyptian Film at last summer's Cairo International Film Festival.

Most of the explicit sex scenes have been trimmed out. But the political message, which sophisticated Egyptians say is the real cause of the controversy, is very much intact. Egyptians who live in other Arab countries where "The Guilty Ones" has been shown have sent home a flood of complaints saying that it holds their country up to scorn and ridicule abroad.

Audiences here, however, seem more amused than outraged. This, cynics say, is because it only reinforces an image of the society that they had already developed for themselves.

"The Guilty Ones" was written by Neguib Mahhfouz, Egypt's best-known contemporary novelist. It is one of several recent films by this country's prolific and skillful movie makers that delves into social and political themes that were taboo in the Nasser era. As with other forms of political liberalization here, it alarms conservative and traditionalist elements who fear it will go too far.

Certainly "The Guilty Ones" invites contempt for social figures who appear to be dignified and respectable gentlemen in prestigious positions. One after another, in ascending order of rank and wealth, they are exposed as shabby frauds.

One suspect, the authoritarian headmaster of an exclusive school, was in his office at the time of the murder — 2:30 a.m. He was taking examination questions out of the safe for sale to rich pupils, his way of obtaining the funds needed to patronize establishments like the fancy bordello.

Another customer was distributor of merchandise to state-owned co-operative grocery stores. He can drive a Mercedes and wear European clothes because he steals subsidized goods from the co-operative and sells them on the black market. At the hour of the murder, he was in a narcotics den smoking hashish.

A distinguished gynecologist was in his clinic, performing an illegal abortion. Another patron, an engineer from the Housing Ministry who provides construction materials for the madam's new establishment, was seducing the gynecologist's wife.

And so it goes, through a dozen suspects. The culprit turns out to be a handsome young man from a rich family who had fallen in love with the madam, believing her promises to give up the evil life, and killed her when she deceived him.

Except for the dogged detectives, there is hardly an upright or honorable character in the film, male or female.

McCartney Household Waiting for the Stork

LONDON — The Paul McCartney household will be getting another member in a few months, with wife Linda expecting the couple's third child. "The idea of a big family is to have a band," McCartney said laughingly Tuesday. "We're providing for our old age." The McCartneys, both 34, said they will continue touring with their rock group, Wings, but the schedule will be lighter. The former Beatle and his wife have two daughters, Mary, 7 and Stella, 5. Linda also has a daughter, Heather, 14, by her first marriage.

LOS ANGELES — Production of the television series Chico and the Man, halted after the suicide of co-star Freddie Prinze, will resume Feb. 14, NBC-TV said Tuesday. The network said in a statement it will broadcast four episodes rinze completed before his death Jan. 29, and four additional episodes will be filmed to complete the series' third season. NBC quoted executive producer James Komack as saying Prinze will not be replaced by another actor in the new episodes. Prinze, 22, died one day after shooting himself in the head at his apartment in West Los Angeles. Komack said the four segments yet to be taped will feature Jack Albertson and the series' two other regulars, Scatman Crothers and Della Reese.

CHARLEVILLE, France — Ten-year-old Kazim Saidi decided to play Mary Poppins. So he opened an umbrella and leaped out his fourth-floor window. He landed in a tree —without a scratch.

HACKENSACK, N.J. — A Fair Lawn woman has filed suit to regain a $3,000 diamond engagement ring she says her fiance slipped off her finger while she slept. Randy Berniker said that four days before she was to marry Jay Cohen, he cancelled their engagement and took the ring without her permission. On Nov. 7, 1976, she was watching television at her home with Cohen, her lawyer, Leonard Miller said. "She fell asleep, then woke up as there was a tug on her finger. The next thing she knew, Cohen was walking out the door with the ring and his explanation at the time was the statement, 'I'm not ready.' "

LONDON — Sir Laurence Olivier was named best film actor of 1976 for his portrayal of a Nazi war criminal in Marathon Man at the annual British Variety Club Awards ceremony Tuesday in London. Lady Olivier — actress Joan Plowright — was voted best stage actress for her performance in the London play The Bed Before Yesterday. It was the first time in the 25-year history of the Variety Club awards that a husband and wife have won awards in the same year. Lord Olivier was filming elsewhere and his award was collected by his wife. The best film actress award went to Gemma Craven for the musical The Slipper and the Rose, while the award for "showbusiness personality of the year" went to British stage and television comedienne Penelope Keith.

TORONTO — Karen Kain, who was to dance the role of Juliet in Romeo and Juliet at the opening of the National Ballet Company's spring season on Thursday, will not appear. The company announced Tuesday that she has a fever and her doctors have advised her against performing. It was hoped that she would return to the stage next Wednesday. She will be replaced Thursday night and Saturday night by Vanessa Harwood and Saturday afternoon by Nadia Potts, the announcement said.

HOLLYWOOD — Author Norman Mailer, making his first appearance on the academy award show, will present the Oscars in the writing categories in the annual presentations March 28, the show's producer, William Friedkin, announced Monday.

FEUDS WRACKED LABOR PARTY

LONDON — One Labor party worker says the former Marcia Williams, now Lady Falkender, was "a cross we had to bear."

Another said he once picked up the screaming Lady Falkender and hurled her across the room "to shut her up."

Memories of many aides of Sir Harold Wilson were jogged by the attack against Wilson's former private secretary in a newspaper serialization of a book written by Joe Haines, who was press secretary to Wilson when he was prime minister.

Britain's newspapers seized on disclosure of the feud, giving headline treatment to the punch-up between Haines and the fiery Lady Falkender who played a key role in Wilson's office.

Haines has continued his attack, saying the former Marcia Williams was bad-tempered, bullying others in Downing Street and that she often rearranged seating plans at formal dinners to ensure her place next to movie stars or her escort of the evening.

Music of Italy Featured at Gallery

Music of Italy in the 17th and 18th centuries will constitute the program in the Theme and Variations series at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria Thursday at 8 p.m.

The concert will trace the revolutionary changes made by Italian composers and development of the style which was to influence all major composers, especially J. S. Bach.

Tenor Rory Hammond will sing music of the Florentine Camarata and the earliest published trio sonata, a work by Giovanni Cima, will be played by James Kennedy, Glen Fast and Anne Crose.

Works by Vivaldi and Bonocini and a unique Spanish cantata for tenor and guitar, written by Handel during an Italian sojourn, also will be performed.

The recital by the Consort James Kennedy is presented in conjunction with Victoria Conservatory of Music. Gallery doors open at 7:30 p.m. and the concert is free to gallery members, 50 cents for others.

Weatherman Fed Up

After guiding the city through its worst winter blizzard in recorded history, Buffalo chief meteorologist James E. Smith said Tuesday he will retire from the U.S. national weather service this month.

"I started thinking about it last May," said Smith, 56, who has served 22 years with the NWS, a division of the U.S. Department of Commerce. "But this winter finally decided it."

More than 140 inches of snow blanketed the city in a 45-day period, and turned Buffalo into a city under siege by storm.

Hustler 'Obscene,' Publisher Jailed

CINCINNATI — "We'll just sell more copies now," Althea Leasure said of Hustler magazine after a jury found it obscene and a judge sentenced her husband, publisher Larry Flynt, to a seven to 25-year prison term.

But civil libertarians and the man who prosecuted the case — considered a major test of whether communities can dictate obscenity standards — said the outcome will have far-reaching effects.

"Moral boundaries have been established in this county and this country which will put limitations on how far smut pedlars will be allowed to go," prosecutor Simon Leis said Tuesday.

Leaders of the American Civil Liberties Union ACLU said the verdict "actively chilled the exercise of constitutional rights" throughout the U.S.

Flynt's lawyers said they will appeal the conviction today and ask the state appeals court to release him on bail temporarily.

Flynt himself repudiated pleas for leniency after the verdict and asked Common Pleas Judge William Morrissey to sentence him immediately.

"This court has not made an intelligent decision during the entire proceedings and I don't expect one now," the 34-year-old millionaire publisher said.

"I don't want mercy. As executed Utah murderer Gary Gilmore said, 'Let's do it.' "

Morrissey imposed a seven- to 25-year sentence and a $10,000 fine on a conviction for engaging in organized crime and a concurrent six-month sentence and $1,000 fine on the charge of pandering obscenity.

MOREAU MARRIES

PARIS — French actress Jeanne Moreau, 49, and American producer William Friedkin, 38, were married Tuesday in a civil ceremony in a Paris municipal office.

Friedkin's films include The French Connection and The Exorcist.

The bride also has become a producer with Lumiere, now showing on both sides of the Atlantic (See review on Page 22). She said she plans to continue dividing her time between France and the United States.

Star of The Bride Wore Black, The bride wore a beige cape. Her other films include Viva Maria (1965) with Brigitte Bardot and Jules and Jim (1961) with Oskar Werner.

Born to a French father and an English mother, Miss Moreau was married once before, to actor-producer Jean-Louis Richard. They have a son, Jerome.

The actress also was the long-time companion of fashion designer Pierre Cardin.

An important message for owners of General Electric and Viking Brand automatic washers

We, at Canadian General Electric, would like to bring to the attention of customers who have purchased General Electric and Viking Brand washers, a modification program on some of these machines.

In 1973 we discovered that, under a certain combination of conditions, the drain hose may create a shock or fire hazard on some washers manufactured during 1972 and 1973. Where these conditions exist a simple modification to the washer will eliminate this hazard, and since 1973 we have been trying to locate and correct the problem through the regular visits of service technicians.

In the hope that we can accelerate the location of all of these machines, will you please check to determine if you might have one. Here's how:

HH JH KH LH MH AJ BJ CJ DJ EJ FJ GJ HJ JJ KJ LJ
and followed by numbers in the sequence 11000 through 92000.

If the number on your machine falls into the above range, please call your nearest Canadian General Electric Appliance Service Representative or Eaton's Service Centre, listed in the White Pages, or in the Yellow Pages under "Electrical Appliances—Major."

When we receive your call, an inspection and any necessary correction of the hose fault will be made. And of course, at absolutely no charge.

Thank you for your co-operation.

Bennett Store Case Postponed

KELOWNA (CP) — Bennett Hardware Stores of Kelowna has been granted a postponement until May 31 in a trial involving misleading advertising charges.

Judge Steven Denroche granted the adjournment in provincial court when defence counsel Allan McEachern of Vancouver said he was involved in another case.

The trade practices branch of the federal consumer affairs department filed the charges after a newspaper ad was placed Jan. 7 for a box mattress and spring.

Prosecuting counsel Digby Kier said the charge stipulates a brand-name mattress and springs were advertised on sale for $138.88 and $228.88 when it actuallly was a lesser quality product that was being sold at those prices.

WCB 'Disservice'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Workers' Compensation Board is guilty of a serious disservice to the B.C. Fishing industry in suspending its inspections of fishing vessels, the B.C. Federation of Labor said Monday.

In a statement, the federation said federal government agencies, regulations and inspection services have proven totally inadequate, and called on the compensation board to accept its responsibilities for safety inspection in the industry.

Third on Bail

VANCOUVER (CP) — The third of five men charged in connection with a $1.5 million break-in and theft of gold, jewels and cash from Vancouver Safety Deposit Vaults Ltd. was released Tuesday on Bail.

Robert McCann, 44, of no fixed address, was released on $50,000 bail on the condition he not leave Canada or apply for a passport.

Released earlier were Paul Thomas Bryntwick, 35, alias Thomas Weir, of Montreal, on $30,000 bail, and Kenneth Fisher, 30, of Montreal, on $50,000 bail.

Still in custody are Talbot Murphy, 49, of Surrey, and Robert John Stone, 36, of Montreal.

STRIPED BEAUTY, part of special display at Vancouver Aquarium in Stanley Park, is this lionfish, a tropical species related to B.C. rockfish. But the lionfish has razor-like fins coated with a toxic chemical which can cause severe swelling.

No Picketing At Pulp Mills

VANCOUVER (CP) — Reg Ginn, the president of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, said Tuesday his union has decided not to picket pulp mills which obtain chemical supplies from the United States.

Ginn made the announcement after barges with chemicals from the U.S. arrived at the B.C. Forest Products mill at Crofton and the Rayonier mill at Woodfibre.

A chemical shortage has developed as a result of a strike begun Jan. 31 by the PPWC and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union against the Hooker, Erco and FMC plants which normally supply the bulk of the chemical requirements of B.C. pulp mills.

Ginn said the administrative committee of local 5, which has the certification at Erco and FMC, decided "they are not going to take any action for the moment on chemicals coming from areas that are not behind picket lines.

"If the situation gets worse, they'll have another look at it," Ginn added. "For the moment they can't see any virtue putting pulp mills down. Too many people will be hurt unnecessarily."

Ginn said talks with the chemical companies could resume before the end of the week.

The PPWC is out on strike to get a dental plan and the OCAW, which has a dental plan, is seeking an additional week's vacation for all its members.

Williston on New Bridge —A Switch in Midstream

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial wildlife branch is resisting a recommendation from its former Social Credit cabinet minister that a bridge be constructed in the west Kootenay area.

The former cabinet minister, Ray Williston, now heads B.C. Cellulose Co. which is the holding company for the government's forest industry assets. This includes Kootenay Forest Products which wants the bridge to improve log transportation to its Nelson mill.

The fish and wildlife branch claims the bridge would cause great damage to a unique population of monster trout.

A 1975 report proposes the constructin of an alternative highway route which would avoid building the bridge.

Williston, although he is aware of the report recommendations, recently wrote a four-page letter to the branch stating that he "feels very strongly" that the bridge should be built.

He also accused provincial civil servants of giving inaccurate information about the bridge to Highways Minister Alex Fraser.

"This is a typical case of bureaucracy at work for which the public must pay," wrote Williston in his Dec. 10 letter to D. J. Robinson, acting director of the fish and wildlife branch. "some day all of us are going to have to answer for the tremendous waste we create."

The controversy, which dates back to 1970, involves a species of rainbow trout which spawn in the Lardeau River at the outlet of Trout Lake beside the old community of Gerrard.

A wooden bridge about 40 years old spans the river at Gerrard. It is in poor condition and unsafe for logging trucks, according to the highways department.

CONSERVATORY PLANS FACULTY CONCERT

A faculty concert on Friday at 8 p.m. at Victoria Conservatory of Music, 1050 Craigdarroch, will offer a program of music of 17th and 18th century England.

The program has been selected from the works of Henry Purcell, Robert Carr, Andrew Pareham, Daniel Purcell and John Blow.

Drug Conspirators Get Jail

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prison terms of 18 and 12 years were imposed in county court Tuesday on two men convicted of being part of a conspiracy to bring heroin from Hong Kong into Vancouver.

Judge Lee Skipp, in imposing an 18-year term on Joe Mohin Chow, 41, found the accused to be "a very important member of a conspiracy to bring illicit heroin to Vancouver."

The judge gave King Sing Tai, 21, a 12-year term and said he was a courier who no doubt had been solicited by unscrupulous people who minimized the risk, but added that Tai was not uneducated and would have been aware of it.

Night club operator Ruby Limerick, 44, the third person being convicted as part of the conspiracy, is in hospital recovering from surgery and was remanded until Feb. 23, at which time Judge Skipp said he wanted an up-to-date medical report on her condition.

Crown counsel Robert Deboo told Judge Skipp the four pounds of heroin valued at more than $3 million was not recovered and described the trade as a "death dealing mercenary business."

More Visitors Spur Park

A new parking lot, a lookout for Sitting Lady Falls, a lagoon-skirting trail and a sturdier bridge across Bilston Creek have been completed at Witty's Lagoon regional park.

Parks administrator Jack Kenhoffen said a Local Initiatives Project grant paid for the improvements carried out this winter.

The parking lot has been built off Metchosin Road opposite the golf course, and was necessitated by a steady increase in visitors.

Kenhoffen said more people are using regional parks during the winter.

"This is especially so of wilderness and semi-wilderness parks," he said. "Family groups, young and elderly people walk the trails."

He said the falls, waterfowl and wild flowers are the major spring attractions of the 102-acre lagoon park. In summer, it's the beach and swimming which draw the crowds.

While all essential land surrounding the lagoon has been acquired by the Capital Region District, the land acquisition program for the park is far from complete.

The original program called for the purchase of all privcate lands between Metchosin Road and Bilston Creek to protect the park from residential encroachment, and to ensure a measure of drainage control. This would involve increasing the park from 110 to 149 acres.

But the CRD has been unable to purchase the land.

Earl Pallister, chairman of the CRD parks committee, said there are two reasons the park's boundaries have not been expanded.

"The land owners don't want to sell, and secondly we haven't got sufficient funds," he said. "The money we raise from the park's half-mill rate is used to buy essential holdings in some parks, like Elk-Beaven Lakes and the remainedr is used for servicing."

However, Pallister said the regional district can control the type of building on adjacent land.

"This only applies to unorganized districts," he said. "But it does enable us to protect park values."

Coin Thieves Jailed

Two New Westminster men were sent to jail for three months Tuesday in Victoria for their part in a Nov. 12 break-in and theft at Roy's Chevron service station, 10305 Pat Bay Highway.

Jerald Kenneth Trott, 24, and Timothy David Trott, 19, were also placed on probation for one year and ordered to pay restitution and damage of $51.80 each.

A third man, Robert Charles Harder, 25, of Vancouver, will be sentenced Thursday.

All three were found guilty last month by Judge M. L. T. Drake of county court of rifling $32 worth of coins from a machine at the service station.

They took the first ferry next day and paid the $22 fare in small coins. They were arrested by Delta police when the ferry docked at Tsawwassen.

Air Bubbles May Hold Key To Atmosphere

CANBERRA (Reuter) — Australian research scientists are hoping some ancient bubbles will help them discover what the world's atmosphere was like before the age of industrial pollution.

The tiny air bubbles are trapped in antarctic ice which is tens of thousands of years old.

The ice cores have been brought from the Antarctic by the Australian department of science, catalogued according to age and stored in deep freezers pending analysis by Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organization (CSIRO) scientists at Melbourne.

The scientists are also studying carbon deposits in the "age rings" of trees to determine whether carbon dioxide levels in the atmosphere have changed significantly over the centuries.

They are looking to the bubbles and trees to help them establish:

—Where carbon dioxide moves in the atmosphere

—Whether the volume of carbon dioxide is likely to change.

The scientists believe the gas helps shape the world's climate by acting like a greenhouse, letting sunlight pass through but trapping heat near the ground.

To assess the volume of carbon dioxide created in modern times by burning coal and petroleum, the scientists have been monitoring its levels since 1972.

Special air sampling devices have been installed in one international and three domestic airliners.

Australia was the second country, after Sweden, to establish airborne carbon dioxide measuring programs.

The tests are part of a global monitoring program involving ground stations at the South Pole, Alaska, Hawaii and Wellington, New Zealand. A fifth ground station is being built in Western Samoa.

The scientists say that under certain circumstances involving high carbon dioxide concentrations, the earth's temperature could increase and lead to melting of the ice caps.

However, the CSIRO research team believes such a prospect is a long way off.

"We've found that gas levels are building up at a rate of about one part per million per year, and, as far as we can estimate at present, by the year 2000 the earth's temperature may rise by one half of one degree Celsius as a result."

Muggings Inflame U.K. Racial Tensions

LONDON (CP) — The rising rate of mugging, once comparatively rare in Britain, is provoking fear and racial tension in some areas of the country.

Increasingly, newspapers carry stories of youths hunting in packs for potential victims and of old people—who form the majority of victims—frightened to leave their homes even in daylight.

Because an estimated 80 per cent of street crimes in some poor London neighborhoods are committed by black teen-agers, mugging in those districts has become an inflammatory racial issue.

Authorities stress that British cities have far fewer muggings than many United States cities.

And they reject the notion that blacks are to blame.

Glasgow, for instance, has a minute black population but a mugging rate nine times higher than London's in proportion to population.

One detective described the young blacks as "not getting a good deal." They have a chip on their shoulder and feel nobody is doing much for them, he said.

Also, in predominantly black communities the rate of black muggers is obviously high, thus giving a misleading impression in statistics.

One young black street criminal, interviewed by The Sunday Times, put his point of view this way: "When you go for the take, you don't think about the person, whether he is black or white or whether he can afford to lose it. Basically you do it to survive."

Clyde Meyers, defence counsel for two of the youths, pleaded with the judge not to view the case as a racial problem. It was just an ordinary robbery, he said.

But Judge Gwyn Morris, who sentenced the boys, said the case was part of an "immense social problem" in an area with a large black population. The facts spoke for themselves, he said—the youths were all black and their victims all white women.

Scotland Yard crime figures recently released show an increase of offences, which include non-violent cases such as handbag snatching and pickpocketing, in London to 7,074 in the first nine months of 1976 from 5,424 in the same period a year earlier.

Muggers look for potential victims particularly at bus stops late at night, outside post offices where the elderly collect their pensions, outside supermarkets, bingo halls and, less often, on underground trains. Other popular targets are pop concerts and festivals.

Police have cautioned elderly persons not to walk alone at night. Many areas now have special anti-mugging squads which have operated successfully and increased arrests.

Other new measures have been proposed. Judge Morris suggested the formation of vigilante groups of citizens for the safety of lone women.

But he was strongly criticized by police, lawyers and community relations officials.

One Labor MP considered his proposal "foolish, irrelevant and inflammatory." The idea of unauthorized, incompetent and inexperienced gangs wandering the street looking for trouble holds out the prospect of lynch law, he said, and is "strongly to be condemned."

Police officers said the practice would be open to abuse by the wrong people. If people wanted to take part in policing, they should join the regular force or its special reserve constabulary.

They say the 1969 Children and Young Persons Act leaves courts powerless to tackle persistent juvenile offenders. They want somewhere secure to send hardened young criminals aged 13 to 15—too young for prison— the majority of whom are placed in the care of a local authority, then sent home to carry on stealing.

A Real Sweet Valentine Treat

Mary Moore

Make it a rare treat for sugar causes cavities in their teeth. (Remind them to clean their teeth immediately after eating candy.)

What I have for you today are two creamy fudges; one is Maple Cream that is truly creamy. The other is Creamy Cantonese Fudge resurrected from 1962 for the sake of the new generation of fudge lovers.

Make either or both for Valentine's Day and wrap in red cello and tie with a red bow for surprises.

CREAMY MAPLE CREAM
(about 1½ pounds)

3 c. light brown sugar (golden yellow)
⅔ c. milk
1 tbsp. corn syrup
2 tbsp. butter
1 tsp. vanilla
½ to 1 c. chopped walnuts

In heavy pan (I used my small aluminum pressure cooker) combine sugar, milk and corn syrup. Wipe down sides of pan with clean, damp dishcloth and boil, without stirring, to 235 deg. Fahr. (soft ball stage when big drop is tested in cold water). Remove from heat at once and add butter and vanilla, but do not stir them in. Allow to stand still until you can hold the palm of your hand on the outside without discomfort (about one-half hour).

Beat until when you let some dribble from side of spoon it leaves a very small mound about ¼" above surface — about 8 minutes. Immediately stir in nuts and pour onto buttered pan (I used a layer cake tin), working quickly and using strong rubber scraper to clean out pot.

CREAMY CANTONESE FUDGE

1 lb. (2½ c.) light brown sugar
⅛ tsp. salt
1 tbsp. lightcorn syrup
1 tbsp. butter
1 6-oz. can evaporated milk
1 tsp. vanilla
¼ c. finely chopped candied (not crystallized) ginger
½ c. chopper nuts (any variety you wish)

In a heavy pot mix togethether the sugar, salt, corn syrup, butter and milk. You must have a candy thermometer. Put the thermometer in the pot. Bring to boiling and boil to 235 deg. Fahr. stirring almost constantly. Do not let mercury go one hairsbreadth above 235 reg. Fahr. for this is the temperature at which you achieve creamy fudge. Remove from heat and let stand until it is room temperature. Add ginger, nuts and vanilla and beat with spoon by hand until it begins to hold its shape. Pour onto buttered pan, swirling it to give attractive top, to ¾" depth. Chill until hard.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

We've received so many letters requesting specific information on individual plants that we are going through the plants, one at a time, sharing all pertinent information. You will want to clip these columns as we'll be introducing you to new potential plant friends, as well as reintroducing you to some old favorites.

DRACAENA: The Dracaena family is very large large, not only in number of varieties but in plant size as well. Sometimes reaching heights of 12 feet, they are very happy living inside and can adjust to almost any situation.

Some varieties are very dramatic, such as the cane-like fragrans, where the foliage grows out of a long stalk. The leaves are dark green with a broad yellow stripe down the centre.

The care of the dracaenas is simple. They need only medium light, even the varieties with variegated leaves, but as always the more light the better. They want a thorough watering when the soil is dry to the touch and a daily misting. Some people are tempted to shine the broad leaves of these beauties, but Mother Earth advises against using any leaf shine with an oil base, since it clogs their pores and makes it difficult for them to breathe. Quite often it poisons them. The misting will keep the plants dust-free and an occasional bath is recommended, followed by wiping the leaves with a soft towel.

tiny bennett

The current increases in the price of coffee, both by the cup in restaurants and for home brewing, is a serious affair for most Canadians on the basis that coffee is addictive, and when you are hooked, it becomes an essential.

Some 27 years ago, in a wild part of Africa I met up with an American husband and wife who were medical missionaries in that remote region and who had been out of coffee for three weeks through a rainy season delay in getting to their stores, and when I pulled a sealed can of coffee out of my food supply and gave it to them, their craving was so great they made and consumed three pots in a row.

It is easy to suggest to confirmed coffee drinkers that they should turn to tea — which is also addictive — because it is cheaper, but most North Americans are poor tea-makers, and seldom know how to brew a really good cup of tea, or have any real idea of the superb tastes, flavors and inner satisfactions that are obtainable from what I call "the real thing of tea."

Tea saved China and many parts of the Far East from water-carried disease, when, without a knowledge of bacteria it was found that leaves of the tea plant that had been steeped in boiling water prevented certain water-borne diseases from coming home to roost. It wasn't the tea leaves that turned the trick, but the fact of boiling the water in order to obtain the full flavor of tea. This killed the germs.

Coffee does not need water at boiling point, as does tea, but in fact is prdouced in full flavor at several degrees below. Since tea however needs water so close to boiling point to "come alive," it is essential to thoroughly preheat the steeping pot, so that when one pours bubbling, boiling water onto the tea its boiling temperature is only reduced by a temperature-fraction.

If you have never drunk tea made in this correct fashion, using a high quality blend of loose tea, then you have yet to taste real tea. Nor the delights it can bring. I'm not writing here about gimmicky teas, such as the fruit-flavored kind, but solid blends, and old-established loose tea blends in tins, some of which have been around for 100 years or more.

Coffee is coffee, but tea ranges from ultra-light, delicate green teas to be drunk hot and clear, with neither sugar nor milk; to the smokey-tasting fermented black Chinese teas — also drunk straight without milk or sugar; to the Ceylon blends, the black and the basic teas from Northern India that are usually drunk with sugar and milk; to the micro-tea-leaf Japanese teas that are whipped in a cup or pot, and served in their famous tea ceremony.

The basic tea I buy for my wife and myself, tea drinkers from way back, comes in tea bags, costing $1.09 per 100 bags. That does us for basic tea drinking of an Orange Pekoe that we consume with milk . . . and when we take it, sugar for that cup of tea in bed, before we get up in the morning, our midmorning tea; our tea with our lunch; our 4 p.m. tea-time tea; and those couple of cups of tea we each have after dinner.

In other words, that all important cuppa-tea that folks requested in the Second World War in Britain, when, pulled out from a bombed and flattened home and asked if they were all right, and if they wanted something, they would reply . . . "cuppa tea, please mate."

And here is the correct way to brew a respectable cup of tea for a group of people.

After obtaining a supply of boiling water in, say, an electric kettle, heat an earthenware tea pot by filling it to the brim with the hottest water you can get from the tap.

Leave to sit for a minute or two, then pour away when the kettle shows a real bubbling boil, and scald the tea pot with a blast of boiling water. Empty, and at once put in the tea.

You will need one heaped teaspoonful of loose tea, or an extra tea bag . . . 'for the pot.'

At once pour in rolling boiling water to two-thirds level in the pot, without taking the kettle down in heat by pulling the plug, and mind you don't get scalded by the steam. Gently stir the tea, put on the lid, and cover the tea pot with a tea cosy or a wrapped tea cloth. Tea cosies — fitted woolen covers — can be bought in Canada, or can be knitted from patterns available in knitting-specialty stores.

Most teas demand a five-minute brewing time, at which stage I stir again and pour into thin china cups. Loose tea calls for the use of a tea-leaf-strainer, but tea bags allow the tea to be poured into the cups without such an aid to tea-drinking comfort.

Each cup should be three-quarter's filled, so that individual tea drinkers may have the choice of adding milk, cream, and-or sugar. But this decision should be left to the person involved — never add milk to the cup, before pouring the tea.

Once the first round of tea cups are poured, bring the kettle up to the rolling boil again, and add a second level of boiling water for the second cup.

A FAST CUPPA-TEA

Pour water at a rolling boil onto a tea bag in a scalded cup, or over one teaspoon of lose tea set in a small mesh tea-strainer on top of a scalded cup . . . and that's it. Remove tea bag, or the strainer and enjoy.

My small village store carries 11 British blends, and 15 Canadian blends of tea. And there is no world-wide shortages of tea, as yet.

Elmer Doesn't Count in the Name Stakes

NEW YORK (NYT) — A couple might have no difficulty at all in deciding to have a child; it's the name that gives them the problem. They'll spend days, weeks, even years mulling over names, accepting then rejecting, sometimes right up until a child is born and after.

So difficult is this decision that children have been born without given names, and it is not unknown for parents to change a child's name a few weeks after the birth, because they are still having trouble with the sound of it.

Names do matter to people. And in recent years psychologists have been stirring up even more interest in them, with research indicating that undesirable names (in minds of classmates or teachers) may be a handicap, while desirable names may be helpful. The names, the psychologists say, are linked to the way children are viewed by others and the way they view themselves.

Dr. John McDavid and his colleagues at Georgia State University first got interested in the subject when they realized that the most popular children in the classrooms they were studying were also the ones with the commonest names.

Not only did having a desirable name such as John, Michael or Sally seem related to how well liked one was, but Dr. McDavid with his co-researcher, Dr. Herbert Harari, later concluded that it was linked to the teacher's grading.

Essays from hypothetical children named Elmer or Bertha were graded lower by teachers than the same essays when they bore popular names.

Dr. S. Gray Garwood (the name is Samuel, but he refuses to use it) followed up on the earlier research with a study of how children with desirable and undesirable names perceived themselves. He used only boys' names because the ones for girls go in and out of fashion too quickly, while the popularity of boys' names remains relatively constant over the years. (Others have observed that there has been some change in boys' names recently, with Jason, Mark and Brian becoming very popular.) The desirable names in this study, conducted in Atlanta, were Craig, Gregory, James, Jeffrey, John, Jonathan, Patrick, Richard and Thomas. The undesirable names were Bernard, Curtis, Daryl, Arnold, Horace, Jerome, Maurice, Roderick and Samuel.

Dr. Garwood found that the boys with desirable names generally thought of themselves in a more positive way than the others. They had higher aspirations, too.

Taking all this a step further is Dr. Thomas Busse, an educational psychololgist at Temple University who had studied more than 2,000 children's names. He has linked the desirability of a child's names to I.Q.

The boys who tended to have the highest I.Q. regardless of their parents' level of education, tended to bear names such as David, Michael, Paul, John, Gary, James, Richard, Scott and Steven.

The most desirable girls' name and the girls reputed to be the brightest were Susan, Linda, Barbara, Carol, Cindy and Diane.

It's not clear what makes one name more desirable than another. Some names are fads linked to movie stars (suddenly there are a lot of Dustins), others have always been imbued with positive qualities. Undesirable names have been linked to a vague sense of strangeness or a very specific prejudice against an ethnic group; some may have been the butt of too many jokes.

All of the researchers warn against getting carried away with the name game. It's important, they say, for parents and teachers to realize that a name brings to a child a set of biases from other people. But a name, which can vary in desirability from one group to another, is just a single factor in how a child is viewed, and it is tightly intertwined with others, such as appearance and economic level. Also, they point out, the research only indicates what happens on the average. Some children with the strangest names do think well of themselves and prosper. Unusual names can be handy in politics, for instance, helping a candidate stand out.

"Having lived a life as John," Dr. McDavid said, "I think the most common names might cause a problem with a kid's sense of individuality."

The knack, he said, was in finding a name that was generally thought of as desirable but for some unfathomable reason just didn't show up very often, as Charles.

"Even Charley has a very positive feeling to it," John McDavid said admiringly.

Stop Competing —Start Improving

DEAR ABBY: I am jealous of my younger sister. She's 16 and I'm 18. She's prettier than I am and has a great figure, and I'm too fat. She's also smarter than I am.

She even has more personality and character than I have. (She's an extrovert and I'm an introvert.)

She has lots of friends and I don't have any. How can I get over feeling so jealous?

JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: It's apparent that you have a very low opinion of yourself. First, quit competing with your sister and do the most with what you have. You can improve your appearance by diet and exercise, and by trying to look as good as you can. Everyone can't be beautiful, but anyone can be attractive and well-groomed.

You can develop a more appealing personality by getting out of your shell and showing a genuine interest in others. Improve your character by listening to your conscience and acting accordingly.

Pray for the strength and determination to carry out the above self-improvement program, and you'll have nothing to be jealous about. Write again in six months and let me know how you're doing. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Last week I got a call from a man named Micky, asking me to tell my husband to stay away from his wife, Carol. He said a friend of my husband's had tipped him off.

When I asked my husband about it, he denied everything and said he didn't even know a "Carol."

A few nights later the same man called to say that his wife had confessed to having an affair with my husband. She said it was the first time she ever did anything like that, and she promised never to see my husband again.

Again I spoke to my husband and again he denied everything. He said someone must be playing a joke on me. Well, my husband has stepped out on me in the past, but the last time I caught him, he put his hand on the Bible and swore he'd never do it again.

I don't know who to believe. This Micky sounded very sincere and said he wanted to keep his marriage together because they have small children.

Abby, I have to get to the bottom of this. How do I go about it? Are lie detector machines available to rent? Have you any advice?

NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: If you COULD rent a lie detector machine (which is unlikely), I'd advise you to skip it. Better get the Bible out and ask your husband to renew his promise.

DEAR ABBY: I'm dating this girl I care for a lot, and she claims it's mutual, but here's the problem: She smokes and I don't, and her smoking really bugs me.

She promised she'd stop smoking if I grew a mustache. Well, I grew one, but she's still smoking.

Please tell me how to deal with this annoying situation.

TOM

DEAR TOM: You could resign yourself to the fact that: (a) your girl's promises are about as permanent as smoke; (b) she's hooked and won't quit for you or anybody else. Or you could get rid of the mustache AND the girl.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: St. Valentine's Day is just around the corner, so be a sweetheart and take a shut-in out for a drive, invite a "single" over to relieve his (or her) loneliness or send someone you like a funny card, some flowers or a little gift. Or call someone you love and say, "Hey, I love you!"

your health

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

My husband has cataracts in both eyes. He is so afraid of surgery that he has made me and our children seeing-eye dogs. His stubbornness is ruining our lives.—Mrs. S.L.L.,

Dear Mrs. L.:

I am certain that your husband's doctor and his eye surgeon have tried to assure him that the operation for the removal of cataracts is safe, rapid and painless.

I must wonder why someone would elect to live in a world of near-blindness. It is difficult for me to accept that fear of surgery alone is the only problem that makes him resistant to medical advice.

To choose to be blind and handicapped is the response of a severely oppressed and psychologically handicapped personality. Perhaps you are doing your husband an injustice by falling into the trap of being his "seeing eye." Your own kindness may be partially responsible for his continued denial of the need for surgery.

Once your husband finds that total dependence on you and your children is not possible he will be more likely to accept the idea of surgery.

It may be necessary for you to enlist the help of a psychologist or a psychiatrist to give all of you a better understanding of the best way of solving this problem which is sadly affecting all of you.

Are there any new drugs to reduce morning sickness of early pregnancy?—Mrs. B.A.,

Dear Mrs. A.:

The general attitude today is that all drugs of all kinds should be avoided during pregnancy. Tobacco, too, is a drug.

Drugs, no matter how simple, should be taken only with the permission of the doctor. Far too many over-the-counter drugs are available, many of them touting the idea that morning sickness can be eradicated.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH ... Patients at home and in hospitals are easily exhausted by too many visitors. The best gift that can be given them is a short visit. Many patients, no matter how uncomfortable, tend to become "hosts" when visitors arrive.

Frying Oil May Be Reused, But Why Fry at All?

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

Dear Ruth and Zak:

Can you reuse the cooking oil for frying french fries? If yes, how many times can it be reused and can I economize by using it for frying other foods? — Mrs. R. L., Chomeday, Quebec.

Dear Mrs. R. L.:

You wouldn't want to deep fry foods at all if we had our way; but yes, you may reuse deep frying oil. Your deep fryer may even have a drain spout through which you can drain the oil so as to leave the bits of potato or dough behind. If you use an ordinary deep pot for frying, cool the oil and drain it through a cheesecloth lined seive.

Fry bland foods such as doughnuts or potatoes for the early fryings, chicken for the next few times and fish for the final fry. The oil won't be ruined by having it smell fishy right off the bat. Oil absorbs odors. You wouldn't want to begin with fish and move to doughnuts!

In our homes we would not fry anything! Deep frying is simply a means of adding extra fat to foods which in themselves have little or no fat at all. Look at the potato, for example. A boiled potato has 0.1 per cent of its calories from fat; a french fried potato has 40 per cent of its calories from fat! That's some increase in nutrition-poor calories, now isn't it? When you consider that fat is implicated in killer diseases such as heart, circulatory diseases and cancer, you'll soon do as we and stop adding extra fat by way of the fryer.

If you remain unconvinced and your family is still eating many meals which regularly include deep fried foods, such as french fried potatoes and fried chicken, make certain that you serve them small-size servings and provide a good supply of vitamins and minerals from the rest of the diet. Plenty of fresh vegetables and fruits is what's called for, or failing those, a good vitamin and mineral supplement. Deep frying foods have too many nutritional disadvantages to be treated carelessly.

Dear Ruth and Zak:

How do these two compare as drinks for breakfast? Orange drink made with freshly squeezed orange juice (ingredients listed as follows: Water, fresh orange juice, concentrateeed orange juice, sugar, citric acid, sodium citrate, algin derivative, orange oil, gum acacia, artificial color and benzoate of soda), OR 100 per cent frozen concentrated orange juice, unsweetened? Can orange juice, canned orange juice and orange drinks be stored in the refrigerator for several days without nutritional loss? — Mrs. R. A., Scollard, Ontario.

Dear Mrs. R. A.:

A drink is not a juice, nor is it as nutritious. The simple clue for you is the lengthy ingredient list. Anything with a long ingredient list is processed, although it generally uses a natural base in a dilute form. It is upgraded in taste by adding water, flavors and colors. Since neither man's intelligence nor ingenuity has managed to discern all of the components, large and small that make up natural foods, we know that, there are some essential nutrients left out. To keep at your peak, go with the natural as much as possible. That's why we favor fresh, frozen or even canned orange juice over any man-made mixture. Fresh orange juice and frozen orange juice and canned orange juice are the nutrient packed drinks. And they store well, too.

Juices, kept covered in the refrigerator will maintain their goodness for up to a week. Manufactured "drinks" such, as powdered forms or reconstituted orange drinks in can or jars can lose a lot of their vitamin C in two to three days.

OLD-FASHIONED SUGAR CAKES

1 cup sugar
½ cup vegetable shortening
½ teaspoon salt
3 eggs
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup milk
1 cup fresh or frozen dry-pack blueberries, washed and drained.

Mix sugar and shortening until fluffy. Add salt. Stir in eggs. Sift flour and baking powder together and add to mixture. Add cinnamon. Add milk gradually and beat mixture for sixty strokes until dough is smooth and satiny. Dust blueberries lightly with flour and carefully fold into mixture. Spoon batter into well-greased muffin tins, filling ⅔ full. Bake in pre-heated oven at 400 deg. F. until toothpick comes out dry, about 20-25 minutes. Yield: 12 blueberry sugar cakes.

Slow Cookers Liberating

Are you one of the thousands of Canadians that received a slow cooker this past Christmas? Lucky you.

Slow cookers have probably done more for women's real liberation than 10 dozen marches and three gross of protest meetings.

If you haven't yet tried this marvelous appliance, this newly developed recipe from the Reckitt and Colman (Canada) Test Kitchens in Toronto, is reason enough to get it out of the box. Slowly Deviled Beef relies on budget cuts of stew beef to turn out a surprisingly savory and tender main dish with just five minutes of preparation. The "devilish" flavor is so easily achieved with an envelope of seasoning mix for sloppy joes and a sprinkle of vinegar.

If you don't have a slow cooker, Slowly Deviled Beef can be prepared in a covered casserole dish in a regular oven.

A wedge of lettuce or mixed green salad makes an ideal accompaniment. This new recipe for Chunky French Dressing should make it especially memorable.

For a well-rounded meal, also serve hot cooked noodles, a green or yellow vegetable, pudding and a beverage.

SLOWLY DEVILED BEEF

2 pounds lean stew beef, cut in 1-inch cubes
1 envelope (1½-oz.) French's Seasoning Mix for Sloppy Joes
1 can (5½-oz.) tomato paste
1 cup coarsely sliced celery
1 green pepper, cut into squares
½ cup water
2 tablespoons vinegar

Place all ingredients in electric slow cooker; stir to mix ingredients. Cover and cook about 10 hours on low, or 4½ to 5 hours on high. Do not peek or stir until near the end of cooking time. (Lifting the cooker lid will increase cooking time significantly.) Serve beef with hot cooked noodles or rice. Six servings.

Note: This dish can also be cooked in a covered 2-quart casserole for 2 to 2½ hours in a 325 degree oven.

CHUNKY FRENCH DRESSING

½ cup salad oil
⅓ cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons French's Prepared Mustard
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon French's Paprika
2 tablespoons each chopped pimiento and dill pickle
1 hard-cooked egg, chopped

Combine ingredients and stir until well mixed or, if preferred, place in glass jar with tight fitting lid and shake. Keep in refrigerator. Dressing is especially nice for lettuce wedges or salad of mixed greens. Makes 1⅛ cups.

Smothered Cucumber Salad

4 medium, firm ripe tomatoes
Salt
2 large cucumbers
1 tablespoon cider vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons mayonnaise
3 tablespoons dairy sour cream
1 (2-ounce) jar DROMEDARY Diced Pimientos, well-drained
1 tablespoon chopped chives
Dash ground black pepper
Salad greens
Parsley
RITZ Crackers

Remove tops from tomatoes. Carefully scoop out seeds and some of the meat. Sprinkle lightly with salt and turn upside down on towel to drain. Peel cucumbers; split in half lengthwise and remove all seeds. Slice very thin and sprinklewith vinegar and 1 teaspoon salt. Cover and let stand ½-hour. Drain well, pressing with towels to extract as much liquid as possible. Mix together mayonnaise, sour cream, pimientos, chives and pepper. Add the cucumbers and mix well. Cover and chill several hours to blend flavors.) Pile into tomato shells. Serve on salad greens. Garnish with parsley. Serve with Ritz Crackers. Makes 4 (about 5-ounce) servings.

Trigg Given Alta. Post

Dr. Murray Trigg of Edmonton, a graduate of Victoria High School, has been elected president of the Alberta-Northwest Chamber of Mines, Oils and Resources.

Born in Calgary in 1931, he moved to Victoria in 1947, graduating from Vic High the following year. He attended one year of Normal School before going to University of B.C. and McGill University.

Published Price Listings Reduce Food Costs—Study

SASKATOON (CP) — When food prices are monitored and published, prices tend to decline and price differences between stores become smaller, a University of Saskatchewan economist says.

Prof. Grant Devine of the department of agricultural economics said a study showed accurate price information increases the power of consumers.

"Even when consumers ignore the comparative information, the threat that they might change stores has a powerful effect on price levels," he said.

Devine, who designed the study, said monitoring and publishing programs might be an alternative to price controls.

"By increasing competition, they would accomplish what controls do with a much smaller bureaucracy and at a fraction of the cost," he said.

The study, designed for the provincial department of consumer affairs, was carried out from Oct. 1975 to May 1976 in Regina, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw, Swift Current, Prince Albert and Yorkton.

Prices of 85 items were monitored in 58 stores in the six communities but were published only in Saskatoon and Regina.

During the five-month publication period, food prices declined between four and five per cent in Saskatoon and Regina, and price differences among stores narrowed.

"The threat of publication can be a powerful tool," Devine said, "because although the retailers in these centres knew we were monitoring, they did not know whether we were going to publish."

He said the program's implications were significant, "when you consider that the 290,000 people or 81,000 families in Saskatoon and Regina spend about $11.9 million a month on retail food."

"If food prices decline one per cent a month for five straight months, which is what happened during the program, consumers in the two cities save approximately $1.8 million without changing their shopping habits at all."

He said a monitoring and publishing program would be valuable in controlling prices of other commodities.

PROJECT GRANT

NEW YORK (AP) — The Association of Junior Leagues will undertake the largest privately-financed project in its 56-year history — Project VIE, Volunteers Intervening in Equity. The voluntary organization has received a $790,000 grant to finance a three-year project aimed at giving older volunteers a chance to help others get services or rights.

Israelis Past Masters At Jumping Queues

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Queuing up in Israel is not a safe undertaking for the meek and mild. In fact, some observers wonder whether such a thing as an Israeli queue really exists.

It is difficult to pinpoint an Israeli queue's end, and its front is usually a pushing, yelling mass of humanity jammed against the counter.

Most bus stations and cinemas have waist-high steel railings designed to force people into forming a straight line. But railings are no obstacle for a real master of queue-jumping.

"The Israeli queue is designed like an upended pyramid," newspaper man Amnon Rubinstein has written. "It begins with two or three people jostling against a counter. More arrive and push in from the sides, squeezing the centre— composed of polite, orderly citizens—outward and away from the counter where they become the forgotten reversed peak of the pyramid."

"Every good queue-jumper comes with an excellent excuse," says one Israeli. "Either he's a soldier, and soldiers get first grab at everything. Or he's double-parked. Or he has a bad leg. Or he's a regular and gets special treatment from the staff."

The situation has improved in recent years. Young Israelis seem less inclined to jump queues than their fathers and mothers.

The queue-jumping phenomenon is a favorite example given by Israeli critics who complain that the quality of life here is deteriorating.

"It's nothing that one doesn't experience anywhere south or east of Europe," says one Israeli. "But we always liked to believe we had European culture."

An Israeli girl recalls an incident that occurred the first time she went abroad.

"I was standing alone at a bus stop in London, and I began to get an eerie feeling. I turned around and, to my astonishment, found that a long, silent queue had formed behind me. The line was so polite, so orderly, so absolutely deadstraight that it made me homesick for Israel."

THEY'RE REALLY VIPs

TORONTO (CP) — Pensioners, some of them in their 70s and 80s, who have come to Canada from other countries are doing volunteer work in this city with the aged, the infirm and even the very young, setting an example for other retired persons.

Giovanni Moret, who worked in the gold mines in the Yukon when he came to Canada 25 years ago from his native Italy, said: "I like working and I like kids."

That is why he spends his Tuesday and Thursday mornings setting out toys and playing games with young immigrant children while their mothers attend English-language classes at community centre.

It isn't Moret's only volunteer job. At 72, he speaks Italian and German as well as English. He spends one afternoon a week conversing with non-English-speaking residents at a home for the aged.

Moret is a member of the Senior Volunteers in Public Service (VIPs). The group aims to provide older persons with opportunities to use their time, talents and lifetime of experience.

A recent notice inserted in Canadian Scene, an ethnic information service printed in 15 languages, brought inquiries from a number of older people anxious to be of help.

Those who speak several languages are always in demand to visit residents of homes for the aged and nursing homes.

While the volunteer of ethnic origin is doing Senior VIP work, a program in which older Canadians are trained to teach basic English to older people of various ethnic backgrounds has been initiated by Senior VIPs.

Training is provided by the provincial citizenship branch of the ministry of community and social services.

The Boss Welder Is a Lady Con

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A former cocktail waitress struggling to raise two daughters is in jail for fraud and robbery is beginning a career as a welder.

Now more than half way through her 11-month term at the Vanier Centre for Women, 23-year-old Juanita takes her welding so seriously that she has become the student foreman over nine male prisoner-students in the shop at the Brampton Adult Training Centre.

As foreman, she handles all student grievances against the administration, organizes production work schedules and ensures students are working when they should be.

"I think she makes a damn good foreman," said a 21-year-old welding student, who has 12 months left in his term for breaking and entering.

"It's the same as a damn good foreman who happens to be a man," said another prisoner, nearing the end of his one-year sentence for trafficking.

The training centre, built for male first-time offenders between 16 and 24 years, first admitted prisoners from the Vanier Centre for Women two years ago.

Herbert Grills, the institution's academic and vocational principal, said the staff and administration were apprehensive at first about allowing women into the programs.

Grills said they felt the shops might become hobby courses for the women "but when they got into this, they wanted the same courses as men."

Juanita said she decided she had to find another way of supporting her two children, who now are being cared for by relatives. As a cocktail waitress, she was working nights and not making enough money.

But the financial rewards of a welding career, which initially attracted her to the shop, have since taken a back seat to her enthusiasm for the field.

"To me, it's like an art," she said. "There is a lot more to welding and lighting a torch and melting some metal."

Special Precautions for Queen

CANBERRA (Reuter) — The Queen will be given more stringent security protection on her visit in March than on any of her five previous tours of Australia.

The measures were prompted by a year of demonstrations against the Governor-General, Sir John Kerr, after he dismissed Labor Prime Minister Gough Whitlam in November, 1975.

Trouble has been less intense in recent months, but he has become the only Australian governor-general to be given a permanent bodyguard.

There has been speculation that the appointment of Sir John to the Privy Council in Britain's 1977 New Year Honors list will renew the controversy.

Police leave has been cancelled in advance of the tour and special teams of detectives are being briefed for security.

However, tour organizers predict there will be little trouble. Sir John will take a back seat during the royal visit.

He will greet the Queen on her arrival in Canberra from New Zealand March 7 and bid her farewell in Perth before her flight back to London March 30.

The Queen, accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh, will visit every Australian state, including the Northern Territory.

In the Northern Territory she will visit the city of Darwin, devastated by a cyclone on Christmas Day, 1974.

From there, the royal couple will fly to Papua-New Guinea, their first visit to the country since it gained independence from Australia in 1975.

Later she and her husband will watch a Rugby League match in Sydney, visit wine cellars in South Australia, open a school in Tasmania, attend a cricket test match in Melbourne between Australia and England and race meetings in Victoria and Western Australia.

They will be guests at civic receptions in each state capital and return them aboard the royal yacht Britannia.

Despite the security measures, the 20-day tour is being planned to allow maximum informal contact with the public.

The Bridge Expert

The objective of a pre-emptive bid is to deprive the opponents of bidding space, and thus make it difficult for them to interchange information. On occasion, however, the pre-emptive bid backfires, for it drives the adversaries into the winning contract. The latter was the case in today's deal, which was played in the 1976 Life Masters Paris Championship.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	4 ♣	4 ◇	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	6 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♣.

After the opening club lead had been won by dummy's ace, out South declarer was sorry that he wasn't in a six-heart contract (which he probably would have reached if East had not inserted his four-club call). But after a few tricks had been played, South was glad that he wasn't playing a six-heart contract.

North's opening bid was, of course, the "short club"; and East's pre-emptive bid of four clubs showed lots of clubs. At trick two declarer led dummy's jack of diamonds and took the finesse. West won with the king and returned a club, which South ruffed. Declarer then cashed the ace and queen of trumps, discarding dummy's nine of clubs on the diamond queen.

When the ace and queen of hearts were cashed next, revealing the 4-1 division of the outstanding hearts, it became evident that a six-heart contract would have been doomed to defeat. But, at his six-diamond contract, there was hope.

The ace of spades was played next, and this was followed by a spade to dummy's king. Then came a third spade, South ruffing. At this point ten tricks had been played. South's three remaining cards were a trump and the doubleton 10-4 of hearts. West had the queen of spades plus the J-8 of hearts. And dummy had the K-7 of hearts and the jack of spades.

When, to trick 11, South led his last trump, West found himself squeezed, for he couldn't make a safe discard. If he threw a heart, dummy's spade would be discarded and the last two tricks would be won by dummy's last two hearts. If, instead, West discarded the spade queen, the board's jack of spades would become declarer's slam-going trick.

"Did you get enough for one each?" asked Elsie, busy fixing things for the party.

"Just that, but not the ones you wanted," replied Joe. "I forgot to go to the bank, so I was short fifty cents."

"You mean the 19-cent ones I liked," his wife commented, looking at what he had bought. "But these are good enough anyway."

Joe smiled. "Only 12 cents each, and I was left with just one penny after paying for them."

How many did he buy?

Gov't Dominance Worrying Brazil's Businessmen

By BRUCE HANDLER
Washington Post

RIO DE JANEIRO — Brazilians are showing increasing concern at the growing dominance of the economy by this country's authoritarian military government, which justified its seizure of power 12 years ago partly as a move to halt socialist trends in Brazil's last democratic civilian government.

The rightist military leaders argue that the deep state involvement in the economy is needed because private firms, local and foreign alike, lack the money and resources for large-scale undertakings. Thus, they say, the state is simply "filling empty spaces" in the economy.

But private businessmen here are not convinced by this official rhetoric, and say they see no difference between creeping statism Brazilian-style and the centrally directed economies typical of Communist countries.

Furthermore, many Brazilians say that if the current trend toward state expansion in the economy continues, Brazil will find it increasingly more difficult ever to return to democratic civilian rule.

A detailed study by Visao magazine, a Brazilian publication similar to Business Week and Fortune in the United States, shows that of the 571 government and government-affiliated companies now existing in Brazil, more than 200 were founded after the 1964 military coup.

A Visao survey found that 78 of the 200 largest corporations in Brazil are controlled by the government and account for more than two-thirds of the combined assets of all the companies on the list.

Of the top 30 corporations here, 24 belong to or are affiliated with the federal administration or state governments. Four of the six non-government companies are subsidiaries of foreign-based multi-national firms.

Only two private Brazilian corporations are among the top 30: a construction company, in 28th place, and a sugar-growers' co-operative, in 30th place.

J. S. de Macdeo Soares Guimaraes, a retired Brazilian admiral and a frequent critic of the growing state influence in the economy here, warns that increased government economic control inevitably means increased government political control. He sizes up the situation bluntly:

"State capitalism cannot help but generate a closed political system. And when the dismantling of private enterprise is consummated, Brazil will find itself with a political regime that has no freedom and no justice — and whose name is none other than communism. What irony! We are establishing communism under the flag of anti-communism."

Macedo Soares was indicted last year on charges of "endangering national security" for allegedly slandering Brazil's federal planning secretary, whom he holds partially responsible for the current spread of statism. The case was eventually shelved.

Brazilian governments became involved in the economy long before the present military regime came to power. Brazil began nationalizing its railroads in 1901. Next, the government moved into banking and credit and the regulation of the overseas marketing of such Brazilian commodities as coffee and sugar. Brazil's first major industrialization project, a steel mill constructed in the 1940s, was built with government capital, because local private businessmen and foreign corporations could not or would not commit the millions of dollars that were needed.

Later, due in large part to out-and-out nationalism, the Brazilian government went into the oil-prospecting and refining business and into iron-mining.

Ever since the 1964 military takeover, however, the proliferation and expansion of government-run companies here has become, in the eyes of many, a monster out of control.

For example, the Banco do Brasil, the government-run commercial bank, recently opened 251 new branches throughout the country, raising its total to more than a thousand. Private Brazilian bankers complain bitterly that the government is freezing them out of scores of cities and towns where they could do a perfectly adequate job of lending money and taking deposits.

Petrobras, the government oil company, now has 35 subsidiary companies including a fertilizer plant, a synthetic rubber company, and an overseas trading company — which, among other things, has been selling shoes to the Soviet Union.

Electrobras, the government's electric-power holding company, has set up 37 affiliated firms in recent years, and in only 19 months since the signing of a controversial nuclear technology agreement between Brazil and West Germany, Nuclebras, the Brazilian government's nuclear-energy company, already has six subsidiaries and two more on the way.

Aerial Survey Bares Amazon Secrets

Washington Post

RIO DE JANEIRO — For the first time in its history, Brazil is finding out what really exists in its myth-shrouded Amazon jungle. An accurate profile of this region, which is vast, remote and largely uninhabited, yet potentially rich in natural resources, is beginning to emerge from an ambitious aerial radar survey organized by the Brazilian government.

This undertaking could help Brazil develop the Amazon jungle in a rational and intelligent manner and move the huge country closer to its goal of becoming a major developed nation.

The aerial survey, which has cost some $25 million in the past six years, has produced an incredible amount of new data about the region. It also has revealed how Brazil wasted large amounts of time and money, both foolishly and destructively, on poorly thought-out Amazon development schemes in the past.

Radar maps produced by the survey indicate that the Brazilian region is dotted with potentially valuable deposits of minerals such as bauxite, iron ore, tin ore, manganese, limestone and even gold, diamonds and radioactive substances — which no one knew were there before. The radar maps show that some of the Amazon's tributaries and mountains — which have been routinely marked in on globes and atlases all over the world for years — actually are miles away from where mapmakers thought they were.

The survey maps also tell which parts of the Amazon jungle may be best suited for farm settlements and highways, which parts should be used for large-scale timber and cattle raising, and which parts for ecological or economic reason would best be left alone. Detailed reports accompanying the maps note that much of the development in the region so far has been the wrong kind in the wrong place.

"People have spoken of the Amazon jungle as everything from a green hell to the breadbasket of the world," says Otto Bittencourt Netto, technical director of the project. "But we who have been working there all this time don't dare to make a single affirmative statement about that region yet."

The radar maps are compiled from images collected by a Caravelle jet airliner that has been methodically crisscrossing the Amazonian skies at 32,000 feet.

The radar information is then checked on the ground by technicians who are lowered into the otherwise inaccessible jungle by Brazilian air force helicopters. More than 40 people have been killed during the mapping project, most of them in helicopter crashes.

To date, 960,000 square miles of Brazil's Amazon region have been charted with radar maps.

Some of the survey's findings have been classified by the Brazilian armed forces — such as maps of Brazil's borders with French Guiana, Surinam, Guyana and Venezuela. This could aggravate fears that Brazil harbors imperialistic designs on the rest of the continent, although Brazil insists that it has no dreams of expansion.

Much of the radar survey information is available to the public and some has even been distributed overseas. Report No. 10, which was just released, is typical. It covers a rectangular section of jungle measuring 113,500 square miles which includes the important cities of Manaus and Santarem, long stretches of the Amazon and Tapajos rivers and a major part of the new and much-ballyhooed Transamazon Highway.

A look at highlights of the report shows the region's potential richness as well as the bad planning and lack of coordination that has occurred there already.

The radar has picked up indications of nearly 25 important minerals in this section, including what appear to be commercially exploitable deposits of bauxite, iron ore, gypsum and rock salt. Several mining companies, foreign as well as Brazilian, are actively interested in starting up projects, the report says.

Large expanses of land beneath the jungle foliage in this section are swampy and "Do not offer favorable conditions for the planning and execution of highway projects."

Oil Claims Foul Off-Shore Boundaries

By ALEX BINKLEY

OTTAWA (CP) — The final step to 200-mile fisheries jurisdiction, the negotiation of boundary lines with the United States, France and Denmark, will probably take at least a year, federal officials think. Petroleum rights are a factor.

Little difficulty is expected with Denmark.

Negotiations with the U.S. and France are in the preliminary stages and officials say tough bargaining lies ahead.

While Canada doesn't favor the idea, there is even a possibility that the World Court or another third party may have to be called on to determine boundaries.

Of immediate interest in the talks are fish stocks in four of the six "unsettled maritime boundaries"—the official term for areas where boundary claims are under dispute.

But the oil and gas potential of the East Coast also figures in the bargaining. The boundaries will apply when the 200 mile limit becomes an economic zone as well, covering the so-called continental shelf.

The Americans are involved in boundary lines for the Georges Bank area off southern Nova Scotia, the Strait of Juan de Fuca area between British Columbia and Washington state, the Dixon Entrance between B.C. and Alaska and the Beaufort Sea area between Alaska and the Yukon.

Agreement has to be reached with France for boundary or territorial sea around the French islands of St. Pierre Miquelon off Newfoundland's south coast.

Canada's 200-mile limit in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans became law Jan. 1. It will take effect in the Arctic March 1, the same day the U.S. extends its fisheries jurisdiction.

Talks began in Los Angeles in mid-January for an interim fisheries arrangement with the U.S. so fishermen of the two countries can continue operating in disputed waters.

Canada hopes to conclude that arrangement by March to allow boundary talks to commence in earnest.

An interim fisheries arrangement already reached with France for St. Pierre-Miquelon basically requires regulation of fishermen working near the island. Under a 1972 agreement, some St. Pierre and mainland France fishermen are allowed to fish cod in the Gulf of St. Lawrence until 1984.

The negotiations with the U.S. are the most vital and the government has said it will not consider tradeoffs between any of the boundary areas to speed up a settlement. Officials say each boundary has to be "self-balancing."

Following is a summary of the issues at stake in the six boundary negotiations:

Georges Bank: Canada has drawn a boundary line equidistant from the U.S. and Canadian coasts that gives it the northeastern section of the bank, its teeming fish stocks, productive scallop ground and good petroleum potential. The U.S. has staked out a boundary line along the Fundian Channel, which would include all of Georges Bank.

Georges Bank, a traditional fishing ground for Nova Scotians and New Brunswick, may be the most difficult problem to resolve.

Strait of Juan de Fuca: The boundary line inside the strait was settled in an 1846 treaty. Both countries agree that the boundary extension should be determined by equidistance but there is some technical disagreement on how the line should be drawn and there are several areas where boundaries proposed by the two countries overlap.

Dixon Entrance: Here, too, the two countries have agreed on equidistance but little else. The 1903 Alaskan Boundary arbitration, gave the U.S. the large panhandle along the Northern B.C. coast and was a major political issue of the day because Canada considered Britain sacrificed Canadian interests for good relations with the Americans.

The arbitration drew a line at the top of Dixon Entrance which Canada immediately said was the boundary line. The U.S. said it gave the U.S. the land north of the line and Canada the land to the south but made no provision for the water.

By the 1920s the line had become a "clear difference of opinion between the two countries" that has remained unresolved.

Canada has drawn its boundary line by equidistance using the seaward terminal of the line as its starting point. The U.S. has drawn its line from the inner end of the line, claiming a chunk of the inside portion of Dixon Entrance.

Beaufort Sea: An 1825 treaty between Britain and Russia established the boundary between the Yukon and Alaska including the "water boundary up to the frozen sea."

While Canadian officials admit that the term "frozen sea" is vague, they support the treaty's boundary definition. The U.S. wants an equidistant line starting from the head land which would cost Canada a hefty section. The area is well to the west of the region where offshore drilling for oil is being attempted.

St. Pierre-Miquelon: These tiny islands, barely 100 square miles in size, are a department of the French government. France has proclaimed a 200-mile limit for them in principle but has said it is only asserting the islands' right to some territorial sea. It has told Canada it wants to negotiate a limit around the islands. Canada agrees but expects the limit to reflect their size.

In 1973, Canada and Denmark agreed on a division of the seabed between Greenland and Canada. Officials say all that needs to be done is to extend the agreement to include a maritime boundary. Talks have started and it may be settled soon.

HE WAS BITTEN —AND HOOKED

TORONTO (CP) — Randolph Peterson became interested in bats on a field trip to Mexico in 1941 when he was bitten by a vampire bat as he slept.

Since then, he has collected 30,000 bats, one of the top collections in the world, for the Royal Ontario Museum.

Peterson, the museum's curator of mammals, said the museum collection includes species from Central and South America, Africa, Malaysia and the Philippines.

There are about six species of bats in Ontario, some of which migrate south in the winter and others hibernate.

Carnival Seizure Ruled Wrong

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Appeal Court of Canada has ruled that a seizure of material by federal income tax officials from Edmonton City Police in 1975, was invalid.

Steve Hardinge, director of the Vancouver regional office of the federal justice department, said the seizure of book and ledgers belonging to Royal American Shows, carnival show operators from Tampa, Fla., was declared invalid in a split decision in Ottawa, Feb. 1.

The court ruled 2-1 that documents can only be taken from the taxpayers they involve, and not from a third party.

RCMP seized the books and records at the Edmonton exhibition grounds in a pre-dawn raid during Klondike Days festivities in August.

Tax assessment notices given to Royal American Shows and eight independent concession operators after the raid, totalled more than $2 million.

Hardinge said the court made no recommendation for disposition of the material which is at Revenue Canada headquarters in Winnipeg.

Arab-Jew Clash Civilized

Arab and Jewish viewpoints on the Middle East clashed head-on at the University of Victoria Tuesday night, but it was a civilized, passive disagreement and no Canadian peace-keeping forces were necessary.

The evening had been billed as a panel discussion on the hopes for peace in the Middle East, co-sponsored by the UVic lectures committee and the Victoria branch of the Canadian Institute for International Affairs.

Despite its potentially explosive contents, however, the discussion sparked little in the way of passions or tempers, and the nearest anyone came to heckling was a woman's very Victorian interjection of "Oh, really," during the remarks of the featured Arab speaker.

On the panel were Palestinian H. Abdullah, of the Arab League's information office in Ottawa; Burnaby high school teacher Fred Lapkin, chairman of the Canadian Israel Committee; and Roger Lucy, an official of the Middle East section of Canada's external affairs ministry.

All three delivered prepared statements, were allowed an opportunity for rebuttal and then answered questions from the mixed gathering of about 100 students and Victoria residents, which included a young man in Arab headdress and an Israeli woman student.

"I have seen nothing but an outpouring of hate," he told Abdullah and Lapkin. "There have been no concrete statements as to possible solutions."

He claimed that before they were displaced from their homeland they lived, and now continue to live, "in pretty miserable conditions." He wanted to know why the rest of the Arab world, which is "raking in millions of dollars from oil," did not resettle them.

Abdullah replied that it was not an economic problem but one of restoring sovereignty and rights.

"They (the Palestinians) will not accept assimilation. They want only to go back to the homes they had to leave," he declared.

In his main address, Abdullah stressed that no solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict in the Middle East would be possible without recognition of the Palestinians' historic territorial rights and the withdrawal of Israeli occupying forces.

He said there had been no consultation with Palestinians in the 1948 partition of Palestine, although they were in the "overhwhelming majority" — more than 1.2 million, compared with a Jewish community of less than 600,000 — and owned more than 94 per cent of the land.

He said while the Israeli government is gathering support from the world Zionist movement for hard-line, intransigent policies, there are also some "positive voices" in Israel urging the government to deal with the Palestinian problem.

Lapkin said following the 1967 war in the Middle East the Arabs changed not their ends but their means, by mounting an intensive, well-financed and worldwide propaganda offensive against Israel.

In this campaign, he said, Zionism is equated with racism, imperialism and even — the ultimate irony — Nazism.

"Kill is out, exterminate is out — it has nasty connotations from World War II. Those words don't make friends and influence people, particularly westerners who remember the real holocaust of the Jewish people from 1939 to 1945."

Lapkin said the effect of this p.r. offensive is like selling soap — "if you say it often enough people will start believing you.

"It's the slogan that counts. They take their automatic majority in the U.N. and use it as a weapon. They have enough votes there to declare the world flat."

Discussion leader Dr. Edgar Efrat, of UVic's department of political science, said the evening had been a replica in miniature of the United Nations — presenting two opposing views which were hard to reconcile.

But he said the fact that representatives of both sides in the conflict can sit down and debate the issues offers at least some hope for an eventual peace settlement in the Middle East.

Beached Whales Autopsy Starts

MAYPORT, Fla. (UPI) — Marine scientists turned a three-mile-long stretch of cold and windy beach into a whale morgue Tuesday and began performing autopsies on scores of the mammals that died when they beached themselves.

Dr. James Mead, curator of marine mammals for the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C., directed work on the carcasses of 110 pilot whales. Another 16 were reported beached at Cumberland, Ga., just north of the Florida border.

United States' Most Famous Fugitive Still at Large

By JOHN F. BERRY
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Will the United States' most famous fugitive ever be returned to face trial?

For several years, 41-year-old Robert Lee Vesco has been flicking off criminal indictments, subpoenas and private lawsuits like so many pesky mosquitos as he seeks to fade into the lush background of his Costa Rican retreat.

But recently there was a change in that country's extradition law that made Vesco suddenly vulnerable.

It remains to be seen whether the Carter administration will push harder than its predecessors for the return of the fugitive financier. As one U.S. official, formerly based on Costa Rica, puts it: "The Costa Ricans are a little confused because the U.S. has never given them a clear signal that it wants Vesco back."

Adding a measure of immediacy to the Vesco situation is that in June he becomes eligible for Costa Rican citizenship. If granted, it effectively would rule out extradition from that country.

The son of a Detroit auto worker, Vesca gained notoriety in 1970 when he used his modest-sized New Jersey electronics company to take control of giant Investors Overseas Services Ltd.

Then a $2.3 billion financial conglomerate of banking, insurance, real estate, and mutual funds, Swiss-based IOS was the creation of super-salesman Bernard Cornfeld.

Publicly, Cornfeld denounced Vesco's heavy-handed takeover of IOS, but privately he sold out his interest in IOS to Vesco for $5.5 million. Indeed, the real losers in the Vesco takeover were the tens of thousands of investors from all over the world who put their money behind IOS.

In 1972, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission charged Vesco with stealing $224 million of IOS's assets. In an attempt to quash the SEC probe, Vesco allegedly made a secret $200,000 cash contribution toward President Richard Nixon's re-election.

This led to criminal indictments by a federal grand jury in New York City of Vesco, former attorney general John Mitchell and former commerce secretary Maurice Stans.

Vesco's accused co-conspirators, Mitchell and Stans, were acquitted of the charges in 1974. The U.S. prosecutor bitterly blamed the verdict on the absence from the courtroom of Vesco, the third defendant in the case. Government attempts to extradict Vesco from the Bahamas and Costa Rica were unsuccessful.

For a time, Vesco considered settling in Nassau whose troubled economy welcomed his money. But soon he found that Prime Minister Lynden O. Pindling and his friends began treating the most wanted financier as a capitive source of capital for their personal ventures.

Vesco decided to move on to Costa Rica, where he was friendly with then-president Jose "Pepe" Figueres. Vesco invested in a troubled business owned by the Figueres family.

Before he completed his term of office in 1974, Figueres got a compliant legislature to pass what became known as the Vesco Law. It said that the final decision on all extradition requests rested with the president.

Figueres was succeeded by Daniel Oduber, but it wasn't until last December that the Costa Rican legislature repealed the Vesco Law, returning decisions on extraditions to the courts.

In San Jose, the U.S. embassy says it has not heard of any new extradition attempts, but expects the Carter administration to take a while getting around to Vesco. Robert Fiske, the U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York, where Vesco was indicted, will not say whether his office will try again soon t extradite Vesc.

Meanwhile, the SEC continues to build its complex case against Vesco and his associates. Just about every week, Gregory C. Glynn, a young SEC attorney, travels to New York City to take yet another deposition. The case is expected to go to trial late this year, five years after the commission first sued Vesco.

Not long ago, Glynn flew to Costa Rica to depose Vesco associate. "I bumped into Vesco in a restaurant," says Glynn, "to our mutual shock."

According to special correspondent Stephen Schmidt in San Jose, Vesco continues to spend lavishly to secure his nest. Vesco is believed to have invested $60 million in the economy, and a U.S. state department observer notes, "It costs him money every day to stay there."

Vesco says he plans major investments in the country's Atlantic zone, whose black population, made up of descendants of Jamaican slaves imported to work on the so-called banana railroad, have long felt neglected by the central government in San Jose. One town there was so taken with Vesco that the local football team was named after him.

Vesco, through a foundation administered by his wife, Patricia, donated $120,000 last year to the municipality of Santa Cruz, where he maintains a farm. Not surprisingly, the locals stoutly defend their benefactor.

Vesco is so entrenched in the Costa Rican business scene that some businessmen believe his departure could upset the economy. But it is virtually impossible to pin down exactly what he owns. Under Costa Rican law, Vesco can hold bearer shares in companies without his name showing up on the books.

Patricia Vesco may have helped her husband's status as a member of the community by bearing him a child on Costa Rican soil. Patrick Vesco was born on Nov. 13 and, under local law, is a Costa Rican citizen.

AECL Worries Not Over

OTTAWA (CP) — A Commons committee wrapped up the first round of its investigation into the overseas dealings of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. on Tuesday with warnings that the government-owned company may face more trouble in future.

Officials of the auditor-general's office, which originally raised questions over payments made to foreign agents to promote nuclear sales, said AECL again could run into trouble documenting expenses paid to the agents.

As the public accounts committee wound up its questioning of AECL executives, concern was expressed over the system of allocating expenses.

What it boils down to is that the agent involved, United Developments Inc. of Tel Aviv, will allocate a portion of its worldwide expenses of offices and administration to the AECL sales. The Canadian company would have to pay that sum.

But AECL chairman Ross Campbell said the amount of the allocation to be paid United is still open to negotiation on services yet to be provided, including the potential sale of a second reactor to South Korea. He thought an agreement could be reached.

United could not be expected to work for nothing in helping to sell the reactors, he told the committee members.

FARM CRITICS ATTACKED BY WHELAN

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan defended farm marketing boards Tuesday and attacked consumers for what he termed unwarranted criticism of farmers attempting to get reasonable returns for their products.

He told the annual meeting of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture (CFA) that consumers take for granted "the ample supplies of high quality food that are always available in Canadian supermarkets."

The public should not count on this situation continuing unless farmers can be assured of fair returns on their investments and labor.

He was joined in his defence of farm marketing boards by Charles Munro, president of the CFA.

Munro told delegates to the four-day meeting that the CFA was fed up with charges that marketing boards inflate food prices. He said critics of the system had produced little or no evidence to justify their charges. Farmers were, in fact, responsible for the bulk of the moderation in the cost of living due to low food price increases.

Lender Protection Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Tony Abbott said Tuesday he will introduce amendments to proposed consumer credit legislation to protect financial institutions from "unscrupulous borrowers."

Abbott said he will change a section of the borrowers and depositors protection bill that places the onus on the lender to prove the interest rate charged is justified.

When the bill was introduced in November, a department background paper said the provision was necessary to protect consumers from "unscrupulous lenders" who offered easy credit at exorbitant rates.

The proposed legislation would permit a borrower who felt he was being charged an excessive interest rate to stop paying a loan and force the lender to take him to court where the lender would have to prove the risk involved justified the interest rate.

Banks, insurance companies and other private lending institutions, while making sweeping attacks on the bill, have concentrated much of their fire on this section.

"It is clear that much disruption could occur if large numbers of actions were brought by unscrupulous borrowers," he said in a letter to the Commons social affairs committee, which is studying the legislation.

The bill is designed to give consumers more protection in the lending market by requiring full disclosure of the cost of loans at each stage of a transaction, standardizing the method of interest calculation and regulating the advertising of credit.

Abbott announced other areas he will change, all of which have been attacked by financial institutions, including:

—A provision which would allow repayment of a mortgage loan after three years with a maximum penalty of three months' interest as is now the case with all National Housing Act mortgages.

—A section that would consider a payment on a loan to have been made as soon as it was dropped in the mail. Lending institutions have argued that lost cheques could pose a problem.

Jobs Plan Deadlines Extended

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Bud Cullen announced Tuesday that the Feb. 4 application deadline for the Canada Works and Young Canada Works job creation programs has been extended because of pressure from MPs and bad weather.

Applications from the Yukon and Northwest Territories for the Canada Works program will be accepted if postmarked before midnight Feb. 11, Cullen said.

Canada Works applications from the rest of the country received by the department this week will also be accepted, he said outside the Commons.

Applications for the $26-million Young Canada Works program, aimed at creating summer jobs for students, will be accepted if postmarked before midnight Feb. 18, Cullen said.

Grits to Cut Filibuster

OTTAWA (CP) — The government said Tuesday it will end a tax-bill filibuster by an NDP member of Parliament and force passage of the legislation by the end of the week.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald told the Commons the government will provide one more day of debate on a government bill NDP critics say only helps the wealthy.

John Rodriguez, who spoke against the bill for two hours and 35 minutes Monday, said he planned to hold up the proposed tax changes as long as possible.

He issued a statement condemning the government move to restrict debate on the bill, saying the NDP is trying to "fight for the interests of middle and lower income groups who must, under the government's tax amendments, carry an even heavier load of the tax burden."

The legislation would limit to the 1976 taxation year a 10-per-cent surtax on incomes over $30,000, beef up tax exemptions for those who buy private retirement plans and increase exemptions for people who send their children to child care centres.

The government imposed a time limit on debate at an earlier stage of discussion, and Macdonald said he would do the same now that it is at third and final reading stage.

As first opposition speaker during third-reading debate, Rodriguez could speak for as long as he wished under House rules. But by invoking rule 75C—a form of closure—the government will ensure the bill passes by the end of the week.

He had vowed to speak until Friday to delay the bill.

Tax officials have said that they will be forced to hold up refunds unless the proposed tax changes pass by the end of February.

Eskimo Skill In Carving Aids Surgeon

OTTAWA (CP) — An Eskimo carver and a Saskatchewan surgeon have teamed on a project to help children who have one leg shorter than the other.

Master carver Nick Sikkuark of Pelly Bay, N.W.T., and orthopedic surgeon Borden Bachynski of Regina are producing ivory pins for a surgical process known as leg lengthening. The story of their work is reported in the January issue of The Interpreter, a monthly newspaper produced by the N.W.T. government.

Many children have one leg that grows more quickly than the other, something that can cause a permanent limp. This is caused by faster blood flow in one leg, making it grow too quickly.

Surgeons have overcome the problem by implanting a foreign substance, such as a metal pin, into the bone of the shorter leg. The pin stimulates blood flow and therefore growth of the bone.

Ivory is thought to be one of the least harmful substances to human bone and Dr. Bachnynski has been working on its use since 1960. He refined the techniques needed for using ivory pins, then went looking for someone who could carve tiny pieces of ivory.

Sikkuark is a self-taught carver who was taken in by Roman Catholic priests when he was 12. He was sent to a church school in Winnipeg and later studied for the priesthood in Ottawa. He returned to live in the North and to carve about 10 years ago.

Builders Predict Prices Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Housing starts in Canada might be 10 to 20 per cent below the 1976 record of 270,203 this year but prices will rise eight to 10 per cent over last year, Eric Bergman, new president of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada (HUDAC), said Tuesday.

The construction industry in the United States, meanwhile, should "see a better housing year," Robert Arquilla, president of the National Association of Home Builders in the U.S. told the HUDAC annual convention.

Even after listing the threats, he said he still believes the industry's fortunes will improve this year.

Arquilla, of Chicago, said 1.8 million to 1.9 million housing starts are forecast for the U.S. this year, up 20 per cent from the 1.54 million in 1976.

Bergman, a Winnipeg builder, said he expects 220,000 to 245,000 housing starts in 1977.

"We built more than the market was capable of absorbing (in 1976)," he said. "and this year we will have to adjust through economic necessity."

He said that some of the anticipated price increase this year might come through labor contracts up for renewal.

Bergman also said that Canadians should return to smaller building lots so people can afford new housing. Municipalities "do not realize that greater housing density makes for more efficient municipal services, whether police or initial infrasturcture costs."

"No-growth advocates who influence politicians because of their votes are being un-Canadian and selfish," said Bergman.

He also said that a 78-percent increase, to $107 million, in federal residential rehabilitation funds, announced Monday, won't make much overall impact on housing.

Canadian involvement in the U.S. has been accelerating during the last four or five years and especially during the last year, developers at the meeting said.

OUELLET EYED PQ

Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet, who said he once considered joining the separatist Parti Quebecois, called on Canadians Tuesday to strive for national unity.

He told a University of Victoria audience that nationhood would have a better chance for survival if Canadians shed their narrow regional thinking and travelled so as to know Canada better.

Ouellet said he could have joined the Parti Quebecois during his university years when everyone in school appeared to be pro-separatist.

"But I made the other choice which, I submit to you, at the moment was a difficult choice to make."

To have turned away from national unity as a student would have been to abdicate the "past history of my people," he said.

"It would have meant giving the rest of Canada away to the anglophones — and I didn't want to give it to the anglophones."

The comment brought a burst of laughter, but the minister said his real thinking had been to preserve all of Canada for all Canadians.

Hydro, Ottawa Test Coal Heating

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro and the federal department of mines, energy and resources are looking at the feasibility of building a demonstration power plant, based on coal.

The proposed plan would introduce into Canada the technology of coal gasification on a demonstration scale, provide for research and testing, and provide a way to get instant expertise in a new field, a report commissioned by Hydro and the energy department says.

The study began in 1974, when Hydro was thinking of mining Hat Creek coal, and burning it in a conventional steam-powered generating plant.

Hydro and the energy department jointly retained the firms of Intercontinental Engineering, E.P.D. Consultants, Shawinigan Engineering Co. and the Lummus Co. Canada Ltd. to study American and European research in turning coal into electricity. They were to assess the advantages of using new technology in Hydro's first coal-fired generating plant.

The Consultants said new and unproven techniques should not be used by Hydro at this time.

Turning coal into power is such a long term job, that energy savings would be effected sooner by improving home heating systems, the report says.

Houses would use less energy if they received their heat from a central plant, if gas furnaces were made more efficient, and if cheap heat pumps were available.

The report said expensive research has been going on for 75 years, and even after that time improvements in the efficiency of coal-fired generation will be no more than 10 to 15 per cent — and not for 10 to 15 years.

The consultants suggested the installation of a pilot central heat system in B.C. with hot water piped to homes. They said some European cities use the waste heat from coal-fired generating plants for this purpose.

They suggested that a demonstration central heat plant could be operated with a heat pump, which uses a refrigeration process to extract heat from outdoor air.

Other studies have found heat pumps, sized for individual homes, are twice as efficient as conventional electric heat, the report said.

Equipment on the market at present time is expensive because it is built to provide heat in winter, and air-conditioning in summer. The consultants suggest that the air-conditioning feature is not necessary for west coast homes, and that a simple unit providing heat alone, would be less costly.

"It appears particularly important that emphasis be put on the poor efficiency of the average gas furnace, and on measures which might be taken to improve it," the report said.

The consultants were given three major assignments — to study advanced, efficient, clean methods of generating electricity from coal; to study the production of synthetic natural gas from coal; and to study the feasibility of using Hat Creek coal to fuel the Currard thermal plant near Port Moody, which now runs on either gas or oil.

Crash Kills 15

SANTIAGO (Reuter) — Fifteen people were killed and 27 injured when two trucks collided head-on on the Pan-American Highway about 65 miles north of here, police said. One of the trucks was carrying more than 40 farm workers.

Don't Over-Feed House Plants

Restraint is needed when caring for indoor plants during these days of winter. Although outdoor temperatures are mild, indoor growing must not be encouraged too optimistically until at least the end of this month.

The main reason is that light intensity is still weak. If you use controlled fluorescent lighting, these restrictions need not be applied.

The flowering plants received as gifts back at the beginning of the year should still be handsome decorations. With an occasional good watering and always the best window light, Poinsettias will keep their colored bracts, (or leaves as they are usually (called), until early April. By that time water should be gradually reduced, until no water is given by May 1. The plants are then given a month's rest, before cutting back to a few inches on each stem. New short shoots will come on the shortened stems for next winter's colored bracts and tiny yellowish flowers.

Give the whole pot of roots a soaking in a pan of tepid water once a week for an hour, for Azalea rootballs must not begin to dry out or the fine root hairs will die. In the dry air of the average home a fine mist spray of water over the leaves (not over the flowers) each day keeps the twiggy branches just pliant enough to produce new growth later. It also prevents leaffall.

When planted outdoors, Azaleas, like their family relatives the Rhododendrons, need a humid atmosphere as well as a period of sunlight daily. Indoors, humidity is supplied by the misting, and strong window light must suffice when sunshine is limited.

Due to the uncertain supply of sunshine at this season, we must use restraint in giving fertilizer to indoor plants. If these and other indoor plants are given fertilizer and plentiful water during this period, new growth will certainly be made, but due to poor light it will in most cases be very soft. It will quickly elongate into spindling shoots quite uncharacteristic of a healthy plant.

Sunshine and good light for 12 hours or more tends to strengthen the plant cells, or harden as we say, thus making the growth more sturdy. When fluorescent lighting is used, the beneficial results can be seen in a few weeks.

Indoor Cyclamens remain in flowering condition right up to Easter if kept in a cool window, out of direct sunshine. Having a tuberous rootstock and succulent stems, water can only be given when the soil has been allowed to become fairly dry.

Standing the pot in a dish of tepid water for an hour will let the soil take in enough moisture for about 10 days. A cool window is just what the Cyclamen enjoys when in bloom. Many more flower buds develop from the underground tuber (which can be seen just at soil level). Every one should open.

These few guidelines on care for popular plants used as houseplants should encourage further observation by indoor gardeners.

Ottawa Promises UVic Residence Funds

University of Victoria president Dr. Howard Petch said today he is "just delighted" with the federal government's commitment to fund a 300-unit student residence on campus.

Petch said the university has been trying for two years to find a way to fund more student residences.

While visiting the UVic campus Tuesday, Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet told Petch he will instruct Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. to process the university's application for a mortgage as quickly as possible.

CMHC comes under Ouelet's portfolio.

If all goes well, construction on the $3.6 million wood-frame complex would begin this summer and be finished by the summer of 1978, ready for student occupancy by that September.

A recent UVic Senate study found 55 per cent of UVic students come from outside the Greater Victoria area, but the university can house only 11 per cent of those students on campus — a ratio that places UVic 23rd among 30 representative universities.

Petch said the university is also trying to fund accommodation for 100 married students, but "the minister was not as clear as that." It is now known if CMHC will approve that application.

Provincial government approval is still needed before construction can proceed, but Petch said Housing Minister Hugh Curtis has already told the university he will support its application to CMHC.

Room and board on campus this year cost a student $1,328 for a single room and $1,220 for a double from the first day of classes in September to the last day of exams in April.

Petch said he hopes that the mortgage payments won't raise the cost of living in residence.

By September, 1978, rising food and labor costs will probably have driven the cost of staying in residences up also, but Petch said he hopes the mortgage can be amortized without increasing fees even more.

Most universities subsidize their residences, and UVic will do so if necessary to keep students' costs down.

UVic limits the number of residence applications that it sends out, but even so, every year there are 1,200 applications for the 600 beds.

After first year when they have had a chance to get to know Victoria, Students are often asked to leave residence so new students can take the beds.

This situation is peculiar only to B.C., Petch said, and was one reason it was such a tough battle getting housing funds.

CMHC studies showed most universities had adequate residences, and for the past few years there was no money in that segment of its budget.

But B.C. is different. Two of its three universities are relatively new. Student enrolment is still growing and projections are it will continue, although most other areas predict a decline.

"The federal government finally recognized the unique situation in B.C." Petch said. There are no CMHC funds for student housing in any other area of the country.

Divorce Dealer 'Guilty'

A Vancouver man will be sentenced Feb. 17 for unlawfully practising law through his former divorce company which operated here and in Vancouver.

Joseph Hargitt was found guilty Tuesday in provincial court in Vancouver on a charge laid under the Legal Professions Act of giving legal advice for a fee, by placing a lawyer at the disposal of a divorce client.

A number of charges were laid against Hargitt on complaints by the Law Society of B.C. Two have been dismissed, two will continue March 10 and five counts have been adjourned to Feb. 15.

In the completed case, former client Ludwig Plessner, of Vancouver, told the court he gave Hargitt's firm $845 in response to an advertisement promising an "easier way" to divorce.

He said Hargitt recomended psychiatric services and that he would have to use a lawyer recommended by the Luxford company.

Hargitt testified he told Plessner he could engage any lawyer he wanted.

Of the $845, Hargitt said $150 was for the psychiatrist, $250 for the lawyer and $445 for Luxford.

Rapist Sentenced

Court was told that Fraser, who was on parole for another rape in Toronto in 1968, attacked a Vancouver woman in her apartment last June. He was originally sentenced to six years for the Toronto rape but an appeal court increased the sentence to 10 years.

Doctor Was Unaware Tests Held Hazards

VANCOUVER (CP) — One of the defendant doctors in a malpractice suit testified Tuesday that he was unaware of a potential hazard when he injected dye into a patient's arteries during a common diagnostic X-Ray procedure.

Dr. George Malcolm Goff, a Kamloops specialist in diagnostic radiology, was testifying at a trial in which one of his patients has alleged that he became paralysed as a result of the technique.

Robert McLean is seeking damages for alleged trespass and negligence by Dr. Goff and Dr. Ormond A. Weir, a Kamloops vascular specialist who referred him to the radiologist.

Dr. Goff Tuesday explained the technique of arteriography, the procedure in which an artery is X-Rayed after a contrast medium (dye) is injected into the bloodstream.

Questioned by Lawyer Harvey Grey, for the defendants, Dr. Goff said the procedure is to insert a catheter (tube) through the groin into an artery and pass it via the aorta to the left subclavian artery near the collar bone.

He said the procedure then is to inject the dye so that it passes through the subclavian artery and on into the blood supply to the left arm and hand.

Dr. Goff said he followed the procedure with McLean, who had complained of coldness and a numbing in his hands, to determine the exact cause of the stymptoms.

The doctor said the procedure went as planned when he applied the technique to McLean's left arm, although he did complain of experiencing pain in the arm.

Dr. Goff said he then started the procedure for the right arm, watching the catheter's progress on a fluoroscope, and advanced the catheter into the subclavian artery.

He said he moved McLean from the fluoroscope to the X-Ray equipment, injected the dye and noted that he complained again about discomfort.

The doctor said he asked McLean if he wanted him to continue and he said he did. Then something unexpected occurred.

Grey asked Dr. Goff if he could explain how the technique paralysed McLean.

The doctor said the cause was that the dye from the injection found its way back from the subclavian artery and reached a spinal artery.

He said this could have been caused by the tip of the catheter recoiling and allowing some of the dye to escape into the wrong artery.

"In October, 1973, I was not aware of such a complication being a risk," Dr. Goff said. "I was not aware of any literature on the subject."

DESPITE FREEZING temperatures, youngsters in a kindergarten near Tokyo are almost naked as they prepare for an outdoors race. For 15 minutes a day, youngsters join in the same program as a lot of adult Japanese participate in: the Go Naked and Healthier Program. Started five years ago, the program has been very successful, officials say.

OPTIMISM MISSING FROM INDICATOR

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce says its economic indicator has not risen much in the last six months but this does not mean Canada is heading for a recession.

But bank economists stress that while the indicator has not increased by much "neither has it declined."

"Its recent performance should not, therefore, be taken as signalling an early termination of the present economic upturn."

However, the indicator's disappointing performance suggests that the pact of economic growth will continue to be slow "and it now appears that without some policy support, it will be difficult to achieve even a four per cent rise in real Gross National Product through 1977."

Archeologists Dig for Clues To Rama Epic

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Indian archeologists are renewing a quest for historical evidence to back the literary version of the life of Rama, the god-like hero worshipped by millions of Hindus.

Rama's story, the Ramayan, is one of the two great epics of India, along with the Mahabharata. Its impact on Indian culture is something like a merger of the Bible with Homer's Iliad.

Digging will take place at Ayodhya, a village in the northern Indian state of Uttar Pradesh that is traditionally regarded as the birthplace of Rama, a prince who survived 14 years of exile and countless battles against the demons to rule his kingdom through a golden age about 4,000 years ago.

The archeologists, searching for clues as to exactly when and where Rama lived, will try to get to know the cultural context of the region as a first step to establishing more definite evidence.

Avodhya is one of the seven sacred shrines of Hinduism. It was also sacred to the Jain religion, an important Buddhist centre and a centre of Islamic rule in medieval times.

Religious sensibilities over sites in the area are part of the problem for archeologists. Another is that nobody is certain whether a culture as advanced as that in the literary version of the Ramayan could have inhabited the site of present-day Ayodhya.

Some experts believe, on available information on the archeology of the Ganga Valley, where Ayodhya is situated, that Rama's dates might not be as early as originally thought.

Some scholars say Rama might have lived elsewhere, possibly further to the northwest, and that the Rama tradition was later carried to the Ganga Valley.

The first version of the Ramayana, by the poet Valmiki, probably came around 300 BC. This is much later than both the Rama legend itself and the first settlement of Ayodhya.

The monkey general Hanuman and his army played a central role in the major battle of the epic to rescue Rama's kidnapped wife Sita from the 10-headed demon King Ravana of Lanka.

Hanuman, who possessed supernatural powers, is worshipped by many Hindus. In Ayodhya there is a Hanuman temple, built like a fortress, which contains an image of the monkey deity.

With Hanuman's help, Rama defeated Ravana in a battle whose result, representing the triumph of good over evil, is celebrated at an annual festival when thousands of giant Ravana effigies topple throughout India in a blaze of fireworks.

During the first phase last year, excavations showed there was a settlement at Ayodhya between 200 and 800 BC. The archeologists found ancient ceramics and pottery.

The second phase, which will last until the first week of March, may try to go farther back in time and will excavate at three places in Ayodhya traditionally believed to be associated with Rama's exploits. One of these is the Hanuman temple.

Bluff Beats Crook

A 16-year-old Colwood boy collared a robber Tuesday night and held him until police arrived by bluffing he'd break the man's neck with a Karate chop if he tried to escape.

"I don't know why I told him that," said Kevin Gilbertson, of 2946 Mount Well.

He told The Times today the only karate he knows is what he has seen on television or watched his friends perform.

"It sounded like something good to say."

But the bluff worked. The man stood still, Kevin poised in front of him in "the only karate stance I know."

In provincial court in Victoria this morning, Morris Armand Dupuis, 37, of Trailer 9, 2630 Devel Road, Colwood, pleaded guilty to robbing the Devonshire Grocery on Goldstream Road.

Judge William Ostler remanded Dupuis to March 2 for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

Kevin said he went into the store at about 8 p.m. to buy a bottle of pop and noticed a man arguing with store owner-operator Bing Mar.

Kevin said he paid for his drink and was leaving when he saw the man reach into the till and pull out a fist-full of bills.

Kevin ran outside and told two friends, Jim Stratford, 18, of Finlayson Arm Road, and Gyula Kiss, 16, of 2867 Sunvale Place, what was happening. Stratford and Kiss got into their car and sped to the Colwood RCMP station a quarter mile down the road.

Kevin said he waited for the man to come out, followed him a short distance, turned him around and warned the man not to move because he had his black belt in karate.

At one point the man tried to get something out of his pocket. Kevin thrust out his arm in a threatening gesture and the man pulled his hand back.

"I don't know if he had a weapon or not, but I wasn't taking any chances," Kevin said.

Kevin said the man told him he had been kicked out of his home, had nothing to live on, nothing to eat and needed money.

A Colwood RCMP spokesman said $72 taken in the robbery was recovered. The robber, as it turned out, wasn't armed, the spokesman added.

Cherry Point Back in Offing As Oil Port

Cherry Point is once again in line to become the main terminal for shipment of Alaskan oil, a plan strongly criticized by the land use secretariat of the provincial government.

Trans Mountain wants to turn the existing pipeline from Edmonton to Vancouver (and down to Cherry Point) into a two-way funnel. On some days Alaska oil would move from Cherry Point up to Vancouver and over to Edmonton and then down through the U.S. mid-west, all through existing pipelines.

On other days Alberta oil would flow west to Vancouver for use in British Columbia refineries. Alaskan oil is not suitable for B.C. refineries because of its chemical content.

A report prepared for the B.C. government said British Columbia's interests would be better served by having Port Angeles the main supertanker port, rather than Cheery Point or Kitimat. Trans Mountain earlier had proposed that Alaska oil be unloaded at Kitimat and transported to Edmonton by a new pipeline across British Columbia.

Fielding Formway, manager of the Cherry Point refinery, said the need so of Arco and Trans Mountain "seem to mesh pretty well" and an agreement could be reached.

Various government agencies would have to approve the agreement on both sides of the border.

Cherry Point is just north of Bellingham and 10 miles from the B.C. border. Supertankers must negotiate past a number of small gulf islands to reach the site. By contrast they have clear sailing to Port Angeles.

An oil spill at Cherry Point would affect a wide area from Seattle to Vancouver and including the east coast of Vancouver Island.

A smaller area would be affected by an oil spill at Port Angeles but the effects would be about the same at either point as far as Victoria is concerned.

Garry Gallon, president of the Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society (SPEC), said there would be a great danger if tankers travel through the Gulf Islands to Cherry Point.

"This would increase by a factor of three the potential of an oil spill occurring than those tankers that would be using Port Angeles as a port," he said.

"A spill near or at Cherry Point would roll right up into the Fraser River estuary," he said. "A spill at Port Angeles would do much less damage.

"As far as B.C. is concerned, Port Angeles is the best site, not Cherry Point or Kitimat."

A study by the B.C. government's land use secretariat came to the same conclusion after studying the options of a tanker port at Port Angeles, Cherry Point and Kitimat.

The B.C. government report warns that detailed environmental information on the Kitimat site is inadequate and says no final decision should be made until there is a complete analysis.

MOUSE IN BEER . . . $1,500 DAMAGES

TORONTO (CP)—A Toronto man has been awarded $1,500 in a civil suit after finding a dead mouse in a bottle of beer he had been drinking.

Olava Mirand, 48, told county court that he noticed a bad taste while drinking beer in his kitchen May 5, 1973.

His wife Clarinda held the Labatt's 50 bottle up to the light and detected the remains of a field mouse.

That night Mirand vomited for 30 minutes. Three days later, Dr. J. I. Gabay found Mirand's face and upper body covered in a rash from an allergic reaction. The patient also showed evidence of liver poisoning.

Mirand testified he drank a case of beer each week for 16 years before the incident but now he cannot stomach beer and has been forced to switch to wine. On the stand he shied away when asked to identify the bottle containing the remains of the rodent.

A-G Dodges Query Over M.E.L. Paving

$69M LOSS FORECAST FOR BCR

The government-owned B.C. Railway will lose about $69 million this year, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Tusday.

Phillips, minister responsible for the railway, said the losses as of Dec. 31, 1976, amounted to $53.2 million and the projected loss to the end of the fiscal year March 31, 1977, is set at $69 million.

Phillips said the railway is operating as efficiently as it ever has and congratulated the new Socred-appointed board of directors for doing a "tremendous" job.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom refused Tuesday to answer specific questions on whether the Royal Commission inquiry into the B.C. Railway will include a study of the M.E.L. Paving Ltd. controversy.

But Gardom refused to be specific and said only the commission is empowered to look into all aspects of the railway and that the terms of reference are "very, very broad."

A royal commission into the BCR was announced earlier in the day by Premier Bill Bennett. The three-member commission is headed by Mr. Justice Lloyd McKenzie of the B.C. Supreme Court. He is a former Victoria lawyer. (For background on the three see Page 11.)

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said earlier that Gardom must say whether the commission will include a study of M.E.L. or it "could be labelled a smoke screen."

Gardom said in the legislature that one of the terms of references empowers the commission to look into the "over-all operation of the railway," and then spelled out over-all. He also took five minutes to read out the order-in-council which ordered the commission.

"It's the whole bag," he said.

Outside the house, the attorney-general said he felt it would be improper for him to expand the general terms of reference into specifics.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, minister responsible for the BCR, said outside the house before question period he thought M.E.L. will be included in the commission's inquiry.

The terms of reference are broad indeed," Phillips said. "I would imagine they would include all past, present and future actions of the railway."

The BCR settled out of court for $2.5 million with M.E.L. after 41 days of a trial on a charge of civil fraud against the government-owned railway.

It was revealed Tuesday that another company which had worked on the Dease Lake extension of the railway, Doug Ragan Construction Ltd., had also settled for about $1.2 million.

The two companies have said the railway underestimated construction costs on the extension.

Tory leader Scott Wallace said during debate on Phillips spending estimates that there is an "incredible mess and smell" surrounding the BCR.

"The over-all image of the BCR is at its lowest ebb," Wallace said.

He also charged that Phillips had put himself in a conflict of interest position when he met with creditors of Doug Ragan Construction Ltd. in August, 1976.

Many of the Ragan creditors were from Phillips home town of Dawson Creek and as their MLA he met with them in August, 1976.

Soweto Pupils Under Curfew

SOWETO (CP) — All schools in black Soweto township were closed today after police fired tear gas to disperse about 6,000 student demonstrators disrupting last year's long-delayed final examination.

Brig. Jan Visser, the white police chief of the huge black city seight miles southwest of Johannesburg, said the schools will reopen Thursday, but all students will be confined to their classrooms by a curfew between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Youths found on the streets during those hours will be regarded as students, and police will be tough with them, he said.

After a morning of book burning by crowds of students at a number of schools, a tour through the segrated township by a white reporter was uneventful.

All high schools were deserted. Primary school pupils were walking home at noon in knots of three and four children. No injuries were reported.

The police were not in sight, and the city appeared normal. But sources in the township said militant student leaders are planning to challenge the government Thursday by continuing their boycott of the examinations to protest the disparity between white and black educational facilities.

Earlier today, police used tear gas and baton charges to scatter 4,000 students burning books at one high school and 2,000 at another. No casualties were reported.

Students last year touched off major unrest in the country in protest against what they considered inferior education and the country's segregationist policies in general. South Africa has an 84-per-cent non-white population.

ANTI-LEAK PROPOSAL LEAKED

Council considered and rejected a proposed bylaw that would have set fines of $500 for aldermen who reveal closed-session secrets, according to the Vanouver Province.

The newspaper says the legislation was drawn up by Mayor Ed McKitka and exempted him from possible penalty.

A report by the municipal solicitor also recommended that a court be empowered to require that any reporter who received secret information testify in a trial of an alderman charged under the proposed legislation.

'Pre-Packaged' Sentences Help Teachers Fight AIB

COQUITLAM (CP) — The Coquitlam Teachers Association appears to be concerned with its members' letter-writing talents in a current campaign against the federal anit-inflation program.

The association wants its members to write members of the British Columbia Legislature and MPs from B.C., urging that the program be ended.

In an apparent effort to ensure that teachers write the letters, and possibly to ease the mental strain, the association is offering a list of sentences its members might want to use.

"Compose your own letter," the association's form letter says.

"You can, if you wish, choose our suggested sentences for each section of your letter. Make any changes you think appropriate. Write two letters, MP and MLA.

The document then suggests 17 introductory sentences.

For the body of the letter, it reminds that the reasons for opposing the program, which should be included, are: "elimination of bargaining rights; wage controls without effective price controls; rollbacks are inconsistent and arbitrary."

One observer who read the association letter suggested that in a time of restraint, the association could have sent copies of its form letter to the politicians.

In that way, teachers writing in would have needed to say only: "Dear sir — 5 ,12, 14. Yours truly."

Costly to Lure Americans Here

OTTAWA (CP) — It takes about 25 per cent more pay to lure employees of Massey-Ferguson Ltd. from the United States to Canada, so much better are U.S. personal income tax benefits and living costs, company officials told a Senate committee Tuesday.

In the United States, for example, most forms of loan interest, interest on mortgage payments, some sales taxes, motor vehicle licence charges all may be claimed as deductions against personal income tax. And husbands and wives may file joint returns if that helps to lower their personal tax rate.

Guns in Yacht, City Man Held

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A Victoria man is being held without charge in a French prison on Martinique after his charter yacht was found to contain arms authorities say were to be used to overthrow the Barbados government.

Barbados Prime Minister Tom Adams claims the arms were destined to be used in a plot to overthrow his government.

Clouston, who has been in jail in Forte-de-France, capital of Martinique, since early last October, is innocent according to his family here.

Relatives say they are convinced Clouston was unaware the cargo he was carrying for Burnett-Alleyene consisted of arms.

Neither he nor Burnett-Alleyne has been charged.

His first — and last job — was for Burnett-Alleyne.

Canadian officials are puzzled by Clouston's involvement. How much did he know either about Burnett-Alleyne or the alleged cargo of weapons before his arrest?

Clouston's mother, Mrs. G. W. Clouston, of 36-3987 Gordon Head, told the Times Tuesday she is convinced her son knew nothing, and that in his eagerness to get into the charter business, he was duped.

"I think he's been the victim of circumstances . . . and perhaps his own indiscretion," he told The Times on Tuesday.

Mrs. Clouston said the first she heard of her son's arrest was in a letter from him that arrived in late November.

She immediately contacted the External Affairs department in Ottawa. They advised her not to go to the press, not to have anything reported, she said.

"The person I talked with told me there were problems over publicity concerning a Canadian jailed in Mexico. The reports infuriated the Mexican government. He didn't want the same thing to happen in Russ' case."

Mixed with wood chips, sewage sludge is good mulch for gardens

Sludge

It Goes Out With Our Sewage But Others Make Good Use of It

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Is the Capital district pouring a treasure into the ocean every day along with its sewage? If not a treasure, at least something which would help your garden grow?

Sewage treatment plants in Washington, D.C., harvest 600 tons of dried sewage sludge a day. Mixed with wood chips, it's going to be given away free later this year for farmers, parks, nurseries and maybe homeowners.

It's the world's largest mother lode of odor-free almost sterile organic mulch and the word from Washington is flowers and vegetables love it.

It will be available at Washington's Blue Plains sewage treatment plant on the Potomac River in loose piles, at several suburban locations, and if it proves popular it may even be bagged and sold cheaply outside the Washington area.

A market survey now being completed for the metropolitan Washington council of governments has found that the peat-like compost will be so popular, whether given away or sold at low cost, that even in 1980 when Blue Plains alone will be producing 1,800 tons of sludge a day there will be no problem getting rid of it.

"This is good quality sludge compost compared with other cities and we've done hundreds of analyses," says Dr. James Parr, chief of the biological waste management laboratory nearby.

"It's very exceptional compost for use in gardens. I use it in my flower pots and my colleagues use it in flower and vegetable gardens. I would too, but I'm not a gardener."

The only major reservations about the use of composted sewage sludge in Washington gardens concerns the presence of heavy metals (zinc, copper, cadmium and lead) or micro-organisms like salmonella which can cause food poisoning.

The seven-week composting process, where organic decay raised temperatures above 150 degree Fahrenheit, kills virtually all salmonella and most other bacteria, leaving the compost odor free and almost sterile.

"It's still possible to locate salmonella in low numbers from time to time in the compost," says soil microbiologist Wylie Burge, "but I don't think it constitutes a hazard and I'm not afraid to use this compost in the vegetable garden."

So much for the Washington experience. There's a basic problem duplicating it in Greater Victoria — no sewage sludge.

To collect the sludge you have to have sewage treatment plants and the vast majority of sewage in Greater Victoria is pumped raw into Juan de Fuca Strait or collects in septic tanks, to be periodically pumped into a smelly lagoon on the edge of town.

There are two small sewage treatment plants in the district, at Sidney and in Central Saanich, and one with an intriguing design is proposed for Ganges on Salt Spring Island. But even in the existing plants the sludge, after being rendered less polluted, is then pumped out to sea.

A little arithmetic shows that if dried sewage sludge ever comes to the district as compost, it won't exactly be free.

The sewage treatment plant at Sidney, being expanded to handle a population of about 10,000, represents a capital expense of about $1.5 million.

Apply that to the regional population of about 230,000 and the first thing you need to get into the sewage compost business on a district-wide basis is about $20 million for sewage plants. That's making no allowance for operating costs, including system to remove, dry and mix the sludge.

★

Much of the Capital district still requires a sewage collection system, something which will cost an unknown number of millions in the next two to three decades.

Capital compost won't come free.

If it does come, it won't pile up the way it's going to in Washington either. Right now dried sewage sludge would total about 12 tons a day.

It does seem likely some of the compost will be around before much longer. The Provincial Pollution Control Branch is probably going to require the Sidney plant to extract its sludge rather than pump it out to sea.

And if the experimental sewage treatment plant proposed for Ganges goes ahead, it would produce disinfected sludge which could be used as a soil conditioner.

'Rip-Off' Tax Shops Skip

They appear to have migrated to the Lower Mainland where there are at least nine companies still operating.

"I am pleased to see them leave this area because they take advantage of human misery. Their interest rates are outrageous."

Tindall said it was common practice for them to offer only 50 percent of the value of a tax rebate. And even then it was not all instant cash.

Typically a person who was entitled to a $1,000 refund in three months would be given $250 right away plus another $250 when the refund came to the shop from Ottawa three months later.

If the person had not been desperate for immediate cash, he would have had all $1,000, instead of $500.

In effect, the customer is being charged $500 to borrow $250 for three months. That is an interest rate of 200 per cent for three months or 800 per cent for one year.

"I hope no one from this area will deal with the (tax buying) shops on the Lower Mainland out of desperation. They should be able to find some credit union or finance company that will be able to help them at a reasonable interest rate, despite the fact that some of these people are poor credit risks."

Vancouver newspapers show advertisements for nine separate tax buying shops despite a crackdown by municipal councils there. Interest charges are limited by council action on shops in Vancouver, New Westminster, Burnaby and Port Coquitlam. However, the advertisements show companies operating in North Vancouver, Surrey and Langley where there are no restrictions.

'I'll Burn Your Store'

A young gunman who held up Burchell's Confectionery, 1137 Dominion, threatened to burn the store down if owner Marjory Burchell turned him in, city police said Tuesday.

"Where's the rest of it? If you recognize me to anyone, I'll burn your store down and there'll be no more store."

A 15-year-old boy was charged in juvenile court Tuesday with armed robbery, breaking and entering, theft, posession of stolen property and dangerous use of a firearm, stemming from the incident.

The boy, whose name cannot be published, was remanded in custody to Thursday for plea. Other charges may be pending, police said.

The boy was arrested after someone spotted him board a bus in front of the Pay-N-Save gas station minutes after the robbery. Police stopped the bus on the east side of the Johnson Street bridge and took him into custody.

Police said the youth had a loaded .22 calibre rifle in a burlap sack. The money taken in the robbery was recovered.

Abortions Continue To Climb

The number of babies born at Victoria's two general hospitals dropped again last year while the number of abortions performed continued to climb.

Abortions are now being performed at the rate of slightly more than two for every five live births.

There were 1,395 babies born at Royal Jubilee in 1975, dipping to 1,341 last year. Number of abortions climbed from 377 in 1975 to 401 last year.

At Victoria General, there were 1,213 babies born in 1975 and 1,032 last year. Rate of abortions went from 573 in 1975 to 631 last year.

Mediator Asked After Collapse Of Civic Talks

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Negotiations between the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association and seven locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees have broken off and the employers have asked for a mediator.

The breakdown followed a 90-minute meeting Tuesday at which GVLRA negotiator Carl Anshelm told the union representatives they would have until this morning to respond to the employers' original offer

If there was no response to the offer of six per cent in the first year of a two-year agreement and four per cent in the second, then Anshelm said he would request the services of a government mediator.

Daryl Anderson, spokesman for CUPE's joint negotiation committee, said today that after only four negotiating sessions, the unions had no intention of responding to the offer until they had more information on the cost of their own proposals.

He referred to the employers' decision to seek a mediator at this stage as very arbitrary and unilateral.

"However, we're not afraid of mediation," Anderson added. "It might mean we will get down to some honest negotiating."

Anshelm said a mediator is being sought "To speed up the process."

Initially he said he didn't want to comment because of an agreement with the unions that there would be no negotiating through the media.

However, he said, since the committee spokesman has chosen to make statements, he would be sending a letter to the committee today saying the GVLRA would no longer be bound by the no-comment agreement.

The committee, representing about 2,000 employees from the core municipalities, the Capital Region and the Greater Victoria school board, is seeking a one-year agreement to replace contracts which expired Dec. 31, 1976.

The committee says it's package amounts to an increase of between 10½ and 12 per cent. The GVLRA said the package was more like a 20-per-cent increase.

Anderson said Anshelm agreed at a meeting Feb. 3 to have the association's researchers work out the exact percentage figure based on the cost of a proposed dental plan and improved vacation clauses.

However, he said, that offer was withdrawn at Tuesday's meeting.

One Man's Gull, Another's Gall

By PAT DUFOUR

This was the advice given a Saanich resident Tuesday when he told the munnicipality's environment committee that his family's life had been made intolerable by day-long visitations by seagulls and crows.

H. A. Pohle of 1615 Mileva Lane told the aldermen his next door neighbor has been feeding the birds for 10 years and the birds now threaten his family's existence.

He said visits by pound officials and police had not helped.

Mayor Ed Lum suggested Pohle follow the example of some farmers who drive birds away by the use of a paper model hawk attached by a string to a balion.

Chairman Ald. Sandy Noel suggested Pohle do what a neighbor of his did when plagued by the early morning crowing of a rooster.

"He phoned (the rooster's owner) at 3:30 a.m. every morning and crowed like a rooster".

He added, facetiously, "The best solution I can think of is to get somebody to run off with your neighbor's wife!"

In more serious vein, the committee agreed with Ald. John Mika that Pohle's best plan is to get a lawyer and have an injunction issued.

Pohle told aldermen: "They (the birds) depend on the handout. At 4 a.m. they're screaming on the roof and splattering the side of my house. Our daughter was born in June and we don't dare put her out on the sun deck for fear of seagulls setting down on her carriage."

He said after a recent fishing trip, one seagull swooped down and took the knife he was using to clean fish.

The aldermen said there is no bylaw that could help solve the problem but the mayor and others gave suggestions that might help if Pohle is reluctant to get legal help.

More Fans Than Flak on 'Mess'

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

William Valgardson's phone began to ring soon after readers across the country picked up Saturday's Weekend magazine containing his article entitled Free the Teacher.

The school system is a mess, he wrote in the magazine delivered with Saturday's Times and most of the blame can be laid on parents.

Valgardson, a teacher of creative writing at the University of Victoria, said he expected a lot of angry reaction, but instead "I was amazed that the calls were as positive as they were."

But Jan Mort, principal of Northridge Elementary, felt the article was negative and stressed the "irritating we-they concept of teachers pitted against parents."

She said that historical barrier is being broken down, especially in schools with an open-door policy that encourages parental co-operation and participation.

Valgardson said people called from as far as Manitoba and their tone was mainly: "Wow, are we ever glad to hear someone brave enough to be honest — to tell the other side of it."

He heard one story after another from teachers whose authority had been undermined by parents contradicting them, or failing to follow through with discipline — stories that were far worse than the examples he used in the Weekend article.

But Mrs. Mort said a lot of time and effort are needed to break down the old barriers. When it begins to work, a mutual respect and trust begins to grow.

MORT
. . . wants input

And there is no such thing as an irrational parent, she said, referring to Valgardson's statement that adults in their role as parents become irrational, always taking the side of their child against the teacher.

"I don't know an irrational parent," Mrs. Mort said.

In her four years as principal at Northridge, she has worked to make parents realize they are welcome in the school.

Now an average of 10 to 15 parents a day are involved in classroom activities — different ones every day, she adds.

She agrees with Valgardson's suggestion that classes should be structured — that is, if structure is defined as giving direction, purpose and evaluation in an active, challenging and relaxed atmosphere.

"My classes are relaxed, but they are structured," she said.

Valgardson's article concludes with a suggestion that if parents aren't happy with their child's education, to call the school and "tell the principal how you feel."

"This isn't good enough," Mrs. Mort said. "It must be more than a complaint. Parents have to be responsive and willing to give input."

She said she hadn't received any calls from parents who had read Valgardson's article.

She said she probably would have known already if Northridge parents were dissatisfied.

CITY MOVES OUT OF ITS OWN END

Not quite as fast as a Bobby Hull slapshot, Victoria aldermen are spearheading the attack on violence in the Western Canada Hockey League.

The subject has been virtually a permanent item on committee and council agendas over the past several months, with seemingly endless discussion and bold threats but not too much action.

On Tuesday, however, council in caucus swiftly approved a draft contract clause which, it hopes, will be adopted by the 11 other cities which have teams in the league.

The hope is that the contract language will be in place throughout the WCHL in time for the 1977-78 season, to ensure a uniform policy of combatting violence.

Under the provisions, the Victoria Cougars as licensees would be required to take "all precautions reasonably necessary to prevent violence at and during hockey games in the Memorial Arena."

Failure to comply could result in council terminating the contract at 60 days' notice.

If within the 60-day period council is satisfied that the club has not been able to relocate in another city, and there has been no repetition of violence, the notice of termination could be revoked or extended.

Mayne Island Sea Lions Bonus for Ferry Riders

A herd of sea lions on Mayne Island at the western entrance to Active Pass has become a major attraction for passengers on Victoria-Vancouver ferries.

"They are certainly increasing by leaps and bounds since the species was granted protection a few years ago," said Charles Guiguet, curator of mammals at the Provincial Museum. "There were half as many five years ago."

He said Helen Point has become a winter rookery for the sea lions.

"It's the herring that attracts them," he said.

There are two species at Helen Point—northern sea lions and California sea lions. The former breed during the summer months on rookeries in northern B.C. waters and Alaska, the latter off the coast of California.

Legal Ploy Ruled Illegal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Joseph Hargitt, a divorce firm employee, was convicted in provincial court Monday on charges of illegally giving legal advice for a fee and putting a lawyer at a client's disposal.

Witness Ludwig Plessner said he consulted Hargitt about a divorce at the offices of Luxford Divorce Systems (1976) Ltd. of Vancouver.

Plessner said that although he wanted his own lawyer, Hargitt referred him to another lawyer. Plessner said he paid $845 for a divorce action that included $250 for a lawyer and $150 for a psychiatrist. The remainder went to Luxford.

Hargitt is to reappear today to set a date for sentencing. He faces five additional charges under the Legal Professions Act laid by the Law Society of British Columbia.
